"World's Largest Resort City Law Enforcement Tourney"

Cops slug it out at Beach

A team from the Jefferson County, Kentucky Police Department came out on top of a field of 20 teams from across the country to take the trophy in the "World's Largest Resort City Law Enforcement Tournament" recently held in Virginia Beach.

Teams came from as far away as Pittsburgh, Louisville, and Philadelphia to contest with local police department teams in the slow pitch softball tourney.

The Polynesian Pools Centurians, comprised primarily of officers from the Virginia Beach Police Department, finished fourth, according to Lt. Dennis Watson, Centurians coach.

A hit! off the bat of Centurian Kenny Dunn, a Patrolman with the First Precinct.

Strategy—Dennis Watson, (l) coach of the Centurians, makes a last minute change in his lineup during the recent law enforcement tourney.

Champs—Chief Charles Wall presents the Championship Trophy (r) to a representative of the Jefferson County, Kentucky Police Department, as Centurian player Ike Cashwell and Coach Dennis Watson look on.

Bigney to lead counselors

Russell E. Bigney, Ed.D., director of Commonwealth Consulting and Counseling Services, Inc., of Virginia Beach has been selected president-elect of the Hampton Roads Counselors Association. The announcement was made by Jerry Sandler, president.

The Hampton Roads Counselors Association is a chapter of the Virginia Counselors Association (VCA). VCA is a state branch of the American Association for Counseling and Development (AACD), the national leader in the field of counseling, guidance and student services.

Mayor

Perhaps because of that, Jones will not be re-elected Mayor of Virginia Beach for another term. Talk on Council insists that Republicans will vote in Harold Heischober, At-Large, as Mayor. Jones defeated Heischober by one vote in 1982.

Louis R. Jones is aware of the talk. But he seems relaxed about it all. "I don't think anyone knows yet who the next mayor will be. The key decisions probably won't be made until the last minute."

conservation personnel, should receive immunization before they are exposed. To prevent rabies in someone who has been bitten by a rabid animal, the wound should be washed carefully as a soon as possible, and the victim should be given prompt medical attention. If treatment is indicated, rabies immune globulin and vaccine should be given.

Rabies in raccoons has become a public health problem, but it is not a cause for alarm. Usually, no more than five cases of human rabies per year are reported in this country; to date, no one has died as a result of exposure to rabid raccoons. To keep this record intact, and to protect your family from harm, immunize your pets and warn your children about befriending raccoons and other animals, wild or domestic. Common sense and a measure of caution are the keys to preventing rabies.

Public to tour Indian site

The Museum of the Albemarle and the North Carolina Museum of History Associates will sponsor a special tour of a Chowanoke Indian Archeological Site on June 7.

Dr. David Phelps, professor of Anthropology at East Carolina University and reknowned North Carolina Indian Authority is presently excavating the remains of a Chowanoke Indian village, near Harrisville on the Chowan River. He has graciously invited the Museum and Associates to bring a group of interested individuals on-site to learn more about our "native Americans."

The charter bus will depart from the Museum of the Albemarle at 8:15 a.m. Arrival at the dig site is scheduled for 10 a.m. Dr. Phelps will conduct a tour of the site highlighting and presenting informative data on the existence of the Chowanoke Indians. At noon, the group will travel to nearby Ahoskie, arriving at the Jenkins House Restaurant, a restored historic structure for a leisurely lunch. After lunch, the bus will travel back to Elizabeth City, with arrival time at the Museum slated for 3:30 p.m.

Total cost for the day, including tour and lunch, will be $12.00, payable in advance. Interested Beach residents may send check or money order to the Museum of the Albemarle, Route 6, Hwy. 17 South, Elizabeth City, NC 27909 and make payable to the North Carolina Museum of History Associates. Registration will be on a first come, first serve basis. A maximum of 46 people will be accepted, and a waiting list will be kept in the event of cancellations. Reservations may be made by calling the Museum of the Albemarle, Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. at 335-1453 or 335-2987.

Through managed growth

Options revealed for Lake Gaston plan

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

The city's financial advisor has left Virginia Beach with three options for financing the $176 million Lake Gaston water resource project without damaging its bond rating.

At the same time, David Rush, vice president of Government Finance Associates, Inc., the consultant, advised that Virginia Beach lower its per capita debt by managed growth.

Also crucial to a favorable position in the bond market, according to Rush, is the continued self-supporting status of the Public Utilities Department.

Rush also advised against the city's use of variable rate demand bonds and caution in preparing the referendum on the water bond issue to make sure that the city will have enough money to finish the project.

Rush said that if he were asked for his recommendation on the method of financing he would advise financing the project through increased water and sewer charges.

However, this was not done of the items the firm was asked to consider, because, City Manager Thomas H. Muehlenbeck said, the city already has the impact of the project on water rates in a study by Arthur Young Associates. That's why the city asked Government Finance to consider the other three options, he said.

Rush said the remaining two options could be used without damaging the city's bond rating; the Public Utilities Department would remain self-supporting.

These include:

The use of a contribution from the general fund for the construction of the project. The danger here would be getting the property tax too high. Also, he said another issue would be equity between taxable and tax-exempt properties, both of which would use water, and larger and smaller users of water not related to the size of the property.

A special tax district in the distribution areas. Approximately 98.2 percent of the city's assessed value would be part of any "water users district." The assessment would be made in the property tax and, also, the city would have to capture increased growth. If this option were chosen, a fixed amount should be set for each year. Also the equity issue would be a question here.

A reference to managed growth from Rush brought smiles to the faces of Council members, such as Meyera Oberndorf, Vice Mayor Barbara Henley and Reba McClanan who have been sympathtic to controlled growth.

The advisor explained that he was not talking about limiting or restricting growth.

"You're not talking in political terms," interjected Councilman John A. Baum.

Rush explained that by managing growth he meant that the city should make sure it could provide the services needed for additional growth.

He said that Virginia Beach has a higher debt per capita than the median for cities its size and that it should try to move that debts closer to the median.

Muehlenbeck wanted to know how the figures can be brought down.

Rush replied: Through managed growth.

He said the municipalities in the median range generally have a bond rating of A or AA.

Boardwalk show; new hours, new look

The 29th Annual Boardwalk Art Show, sponsored by the Virginia Beach Arts Center, will get underway Thursday June 21 and will continue through Sunday, June 24. From humble beginnings as a small outdoor exhibit in 1956, the Boardwalk Art Show has evolved into the largest show of its type on the eastern seaboard, and one of the largest in the country.

This year's show is sporting a new look and new hours. In an attempt to provide better viewing opportunities and an ease of enjoyment, the show has been shortened to eight blocks. It will extend from 11th Street to 18th Street along both sides of the boardwalk. The hours on Thursday and Sunday are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., but have been extended on Friday and Saturday, from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m., to make the art show an event the entire family can come and enjoy. Also new to this year's show is the addition of refreshment tents located at 13th and 17th Streets.

With the reduction in size of this year's show, the vying for space was the most competitive it has ever been. In an attempt to ensure that only top quality work would be exhibited, more than 650 applications were carefully screened before 414 artists were selected. They represent 29 states and the District of Columbia, and include six returning Best-In-Show winners: Steven Jordan (1982), Scott Wilson (1980), Peyton Campbell (1978), Richard Mayberry (1977), David Itchkawich (1975), and Carlton Abbott (1972).

The categories of art to be displayed include: oils and acrylics, watercolors, graphics, ceramics and pottery, jewelry, drawings, sculpture, photography, mixed media, and creative crafts (fiber, wood, metal, glass).

The eight-block-long show is expected to draw an estimated crowd of over 350,000, and sales should reach in excess of one-half million. Artists are attracted to the Boardwalk Art Show by the strong sales potential and over $10,500 awarded in cash prizes. The top award, a Best-In-Show Purchase Prize, will win the artist with the most outstanding work in the show a cash prize of $2500. The award is selected by the panel of judges and becomes part of the Virginia Beach Arts Center's permanent collection.

Virginians among first wave on D-Day!

Only National Guard regiment in first landing; more than 600 casualties

Omaha Beach was the code name given to a stretch of the coast of Normandy for the "D-Day" invasion of France on June 6, 1944. The landings on that morning were critical to the success of the effort to liberate France, and were carried out by troops from the Regular Army's 1st Infantry Division and the National Guard's 29th Infantry Division. The 116th Infantry, a Virginia National Guard regiment of the 29th, received the assignment to conduct the assault on the right-hand sector of the beach. The regiment was the only National Guard infantry regiment used in the first waves. They had just completed over a year of hard training and practice in England and the men looked forward to continuing the proud traditions of their regiment (which dated back to 1741).

The "Stonewall Brigade" had responsibility for a stretch of beach 3,000 yards long. the 2d Ranger Infantry Battalion operated in support of the 116th to carry out a special attack on high cliffs on the regiment's right flank. German defenders on those cliffs had to be cleared out since their guns dominated the entire beach. The 16th Infantry of the 1st Division would land on the other flank. The 116th's sector contained only two passages from the beach to the top of the hills, draws near the small villages of Les Moulins and Vierville. Success depended on the regiment securing both routes to allow the troops and equipment to get off the beach quickly so that they could drive inland toward Vire and St. Lo.

The master plan for Operation Neptune, or Overlord, called for a short, heavy bombardment of the defenses by allied aircraft from England and ships of the massive invasion fleet. The generals expected this to shake up the Germans in the bunkers and pillboxes and prevent them from being reinforced. Intelligence reported that the enemy normally used poor quality units to defend the beaches, and kept their better units in reserve. On the morning of June 6, however, one of the best German divisions was actually manning the first lines on a training exercise. The change raised the price which would have to be paid for Omaha.

The first assault wave loaded into their landing craft from the troop transport Thomas Jefferson at about four o'clock in the morning. It consisted of Companies A (Bedford), G (Farmville), F (South Boston), and E (Chase City). Difficulties began as soon as the small boats started towards the beach and started receiving fire from German gunners. Some boats suffered direct hits; others were lost when they filled with seawater after near misses. Obstacles placed by enemy engineers stopped some of the boats hundreds of yards from shore, forcing the men to wade in water that at times was over their heads. Between fighting nature and enemy gunfire they dragged themselves towards the beach.

Company A was especially hard-hit. They suffered more losses in getting ashore than any other unit of the 116th. Forty-six Guardsmen from Bedford were in the company, but only 23 survived the day. Many of the men either lost their equipment or had it damaged in the process of reaching solid land. Within ten minutes of coming ashore every officer in the company was hit and survivors found themselves pinned down by Germans shooting from the tops of nearby cliffs. The men had to hang on in whatever shelter they could find and wait for help—their effectiveness as a combat unit was all but gone.

The other three companies in the first assault group fared better than Company A, in part because many of their boats were pushed off course by the waves or got lost in the confusion. Company F landed in the center of the sector as planned. Company G came ashore on F's left, instead of the right as planned; most of E wound up miles down the beach in the 1st Division's sector and did not rejoin the regiment until the next day. These companies suffered much lighter losses than Company A because they were partially hidden from the Germans by smoke caused by the navy's gunfire.

D-Day! American assault troops in a landing craft huddle behind the protective front of the craft as it nears a beachhead on the Northern Coast of France. Smoke in the background is Naval gunfire supporting the landing.

The second wave started landing troops at seven o'clock. These companies ran into many of the same problems encountered by the first wave. Enemy fire was increasing in volume and accuracy, and the tide was rising faster than expected, disorienting the boat crews. The men expected to find the beach areas already secured and planned to move inland before encountering resistance. Instead they quickly found themselves pinned down with the remnants of the first assault group, unable to drive forward.

The greatest problems again occurred on the right-hand section of the beach. The six boats carrying Company B (Lynchburg) were scattered over an area a mile long. Only the men aboard the three boats which landed far beyond the cliffs reached the beach safely. The others came in behind the survivors of Company A and immediately began to suffer heavy casualties. The rest of the 2d Battalion, its Headquarters Company (Altavista and Victoria) and heavy weapons company (Co. H of Martinsville) were spread out even more. The battalion commander, Major Sidney Bingham, gathered up as many men as he could find in Company F's zone and captured a large stone house which dominated the beach near the Les Moulins draw. Hostile fire frustrated every attempt to proceed further.

The companies landing in the third wave twenty minutes later benefitted from the sacrifices of the men who had gone earlier. Company C (Harrisonburg) landed along a lightly-held section of beach between Major Bingham's men and Company A. Although they lost their mortars and flamethrowers in a boat accident, the men themselves reached shore in the best condition of any of the companies up to that point. Under the cover of smoke, they formed up with men of the 5th Ranger Infantry Battalion who landed a few minutes later. Together the two units fought their way to the top of the bluffs between the two draws. At that point the riflemen of Company C were able to begin moving into the open fields of Normandy, the first element of the 116th to penetrate the beach defenses.

Warner again

As expected John Warner received the nomination of the Republican Party to seek re-election as the senior U.S. Senator from Virginia.

It will be interesting to see just how the national race for the presidency will affect Mr. Warner and his Democratic opponent, Edythe C. Harrison. Obviously Mr. Warner could benefit if Mr. Reagan's popularity holds, but even if Mr. Reagan slips in the polls, Mr. Warner will be served by the Virginia tradition of its elected officials standing apart from the national party. (in bygone days, when a liberal was president, it was usually very far apart.)

Ms. Harrison does not yet know who the nominee of her party will be, and, unlike the Republicans, the Democrats are making a drama of not only who, but how, they will nominate their candidate. Will it be Mondale, Jackson, Hart, or will a dark horse emerge? Will it be a love feast or a slugfest?

The national scene aside, it is laudable that Mr. Warner has indicated that he is eager to debate Ms. Harrison. No format cuts through to the philosphies of candidates as quickly or as effectively as a debate. It is also praiseworthy that both candidates have made a point of saying that this will be a campaign of issues.

The national news media tends to simplify the views of candidates into black and white terms; so more than likely the Democrat nominee will be called a liberal while Mr. Reagan will be called a conservative. A cynic might say that nowadays the difference between a conservative and a liberal is that a conservative believes in spend, spend, spend, borrow, borrow, borrow, while a liberal holds to the tried and true formula of spend, spend, spend, tax, tax, tax. The differences, of course, go much deeper than that.

To some extent, both Mr. Warner and Ms. Harrison will be tied to their national party during this campaign, but it is fortunate for both that Virginians, as voters, are mature enough in their judgement not to mix up the ebb and flow of the national campaign with the campaigns for offices in the Commonwealth.

Virginians listen to the candidates, decide who will represent them best and vote accordingly. Nothing could be more fair to either candidate.

Bravo

Virginia Beach is extremely fortunate in having a musical treasure like The Virginia Beach Pops, and much of the credit must go to the musical genius of Walter Noona.

Responding to the support he received from the residents of the Beach, Maestro Noona has created program after program with the Pops that are feasts for the ear.

An internationally recognized musician, teacher, and conductor, Walter Noona could, in all probability, go to any city and display his talents, but he is here, and we should be very glad of that. He combines the showmanship of a Bernstein with the energy of a Solti and the taste of an Ormandy.

Walter and Carol Noona through their series of music books, The Young Pianist Series, have guided music teachers throughout the United States in the instruction of solo playing, piano playing, and musical theory. For how many young people will the Noonas have played an invaluable role in their development as musicians? Some people worry about the future of music in this country, but the Noonas have taken an active and positive role in shaping its future.

Now that the Pops has been established on the Tidewater musical scene as a vital part of it, isn't it time that serious consideration be given towards creation of a symphony here in Virginia Beach that will allow us to enjoy hearing the fullest musical flowerings of this genius whom we are lucky enough to have here.

For now, let us be thankful that we have the Virginia Beach Pops under the direction of Walter Noona. Bravo.

A librarian abroad

I have just returned from a two week vacation in England and Scotland. Yes, thank you, I had a wonderful time. How is the trip relevant to this column? Funny you should ask.

I left in early May fully aware that this column assignment was lurking at the end of my trans-Atlantic adventure. It seemed a safe distance off, but I had given cursory thought to possible topics and had decided to explore the atmosphere of libraries abroad. I left feeling comfortable in the knowledge that I would have two weeks to gather fascinating gems of British library lore.

My first contact with books came in a Victorian country house hotel in Glengarry, Scotland. It was a hotel frequented by couples of retirement age who obviously came often and stayed for long periods of time. They were on a personal name basis with each other and the staff. On the registration desk were two table-top paperback display racks well stocked with traditional favorites and current best sellers. Aha! There must not be a library nearby. I turned my attention to the ruined remains of a castle on the hotel grounds. This action was to set the theme for the entire trip.

Occasionally I would remember the article and the need for information and occasionally I would wrench my attention from the landscape to notice indications of

Safe Boating Week

The month of June marks the beginning of boating season in most parts of the nation, and of the boating accident season. This is why the National Safe Boating Council sponsors the annual National Safe Boating Week during the first week of June. This year it falls between June 3 and June 9. The purpose of National Safe Boating Week is to publicize that the best way to have fun on your boat is the safe way.

Most boaters are awared that the Coast Guard requires certain safety equipment to be carried aboard their boats, particularly life jackets and fire extinguisher. It seems, however, that some boaters carry only the required safety equipment and think that a legally equipped boat is the same as a safely equipped boat. The Coast Guard and the National Safe Boating Council emphasize that federal safety equipment requirements are minimums and prudent boaters should take a hard look at their safety equipment to see if it really gives them an assurance of safety in case something goes wrong.

What constitutes a well equipped boat? It varies, of course, according to where and how the boat is used. Each boat and boater is unique so it is up to him to assure his or her own safety in light of their own boating requirements. There are general categories

A Fun-Learning Experience

Summer is almost here and with it comes the inevitable: school is out and the children have nothing to do. Why not provide them with an interesting, yet educational project - art! The Virginia Beach Arts Center offers the ideal solution to this problem each year in the form of ArtCamp.

ArtCamp is designed to both educate and inspire young people in the arts. It offers a wide variety of courses in weeklong sessions so youngsters can try their hand at a number of different art forms during one vacation seasons. The Arts Center proudly presents this third season of ArtCamp, offering your child "artventures" to spark curiosity and foster talent.

To provide each child with the best possible learning experience, instructors and course designs are carefully matched to reflect the instructor's particular area of expertise.

Pam Lassiter, an instructor at Tidewater Community College, is offering several classes involving clay. Pam, a former president of the Virginia Beach Potters Guild, an exhibitor and winner of numerous awards for her ceramics, will teach the children such handbuilding techniques as pinch, slab and coil as they create ceramic circuses and imaginative neighborhoods. All work will be glazed and fired at the Art Center's kiln for completed pick-up at a later date.

Evaluating teachers

By Mary Hatwood Futrell
President NEA

I was startled by the question.

The reporter was surprised by the answer.

The scene was an NEA news conference last week. I told a room packed with reporters that NEA is strongly in favor of evaluating teachers. That remark apparently stunned at least one of the reporters present.

Later that same day, on the Cable News Network "Crossfire" broadcast, even Pat Buchanan, that bright and vast storehouse of conservative viewpoints, seemed non-plussed when I restated NEA's support for regular teacher evaluations.

Obviously, NEA's traditional position on evaluation has gotten lost in the education reform crossfire.

NEA wants only competent teachers hired. We want only competent teachers retained and we want incompetent teachers out of the profession.

I find it outlandish for some to suggest, as they have, that NEA wants incompetent teachers to remain in the classroom. Why would any teacher, or anyone in any profession, want to work along side an incompetent colleague?

To identify those teachers who need improvement, we believe that local school districts must develop and implement fair evaluation systems.

That's a tough thing to do, because measuring teacher performance is not easy. Teaching is a communicative, perpetual motion process that can't be accurately evaluated by a casual observation or a simple paper-and-pencil test.

Evaluating teachers effectively takes careful and repeated classroom observation by trained evaluators. Only trained evaluators can determine whether a teacher is "getting through" to students—reaching them so that learning takes place.

School districts that successfully evaluate their teachers follow some basic principles. They include teacher Associations in the planning of the evaluation procedures to be employed. These districts observe teachers directly, with evaluators specially trained for the task. Most importantly, they make teachers aware of the criteria—the indicators of professional competence—that the evaluators will use in making their judgments.

Positive evaluation programs also have corollary in-service instructional programs that enable teachers to keep up with developments in their subject area fields.

Effective evaluation procedures are, by definition, fair. They provide basic due process to any teacher considered for dismissal, and they also provide that teacher an opportunity to show improvement.

But if that allotted time for improvement ends, and if the teacher is still judged incompetent, that teacher must leave.

NEA believes strongly that all teachers must either measure up or be mustered out.

Evaluation is clearly the responsibility of local school authorities, and those authorities can count on teacher support if they are serious about evaluation.

Thalia Lynn Choir performs

Thalia Lynn Baptist Church, 4392 Virginia Beach Boulevard, has announced that the public may hear the Thalia Lynn Chapel Choir in concert on Sunday, June 10, at 7 p.m.

The choir is made up of seventh through twelfth graders and will sing selections from their recent Southern Virginia Tour including works by such composers as Bach, Handel, Pitoni and Sleeth.

Along with the Chapel Choir, the Jubilation Bells will play several selections. This bell choir was selected to represent Virginia in the Southern Baptist Bell Festival in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania last year. A Recorder Consort will also play adding flavor of the Renaissance and Baroque periods of church music.

The choirs are under the direction of Robert L. Crute, Minister of Music at Thalia Lynn Baptist Church.

Selections have been choreographed and dramatized to suggest thought-provoking answers to teenage and adult problems.

Handbell choir to perform

One of America's best-known handbell choirs will be performing at the Virginia Beach Community Chapel, 1261 Laskin Road, on Saturday, June 9 at 7:30 p.m. The Kirk Ringers, a group of high school students from Wichita Falls, Texas will perform a wide range of sacred and secular numbers on a five octave set of handbells made in England.

The Kirk Ringers will also be a part of the Sunday morning services at 8:30 and 11 a.m. There will be no charge for the concert and a nursery will be provided. For more information, call the Chapel Office at 428-1881.

For transportation, Beach residents may call 340-0902.

Spring Fair to be held Saturday

On June 9, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., The Fellowship Center will hold a Spring Fair on the grounds of Friends Meeting House, 1537 Laskin Road. The day's events will include an all-day flea market; an auction of antiques, art objects and musical instruments, and services at 11 a.m.

There will also be a bake sale; Greek and French foods for lunches; art booths with pottery, crafts and paintings for sale; music entertainment by local professional musicians all day; children's activities - crafts to make, face-painting; clowns; and readings with specialists in handwriting analysis, palmistry, numerology and astrology.

Admission is free. The fair is a fundraiser for The Fellowship Center, an interfaith church in Virginia Beach. For information, phone the center at 428-5782.

Water safety films presented

"Drownproofing," "Water Safety" and "I'm No Fool in Water" will be shown for parents and other interested adults on Friday, June 9, at 10 a.m. in the Great Neck Area Library. This program will last approximately 35 minutes and will be presented at the same time as the regularly scheduled children's storytime. These educational safety films will help adults and their children have a safe summer at the beach and in swimming pools. More information on these films can be obtained by calling the library at 481-6094.

Merit award

Jack H. Stewart of Virginia Beach was awarded a $500 Merit Award in the 1983 engineering design competition sponsored by the James F. Lincoln Arc Welding Foundation of Cleveland, Ohio. Stewart is Vice President of the MMM Design Group in Norfolk. The award recognized his design of welded beam assemblies used to rehabilitate the Dozier Bridge in Virginia Beach.

The rehabilitation of the bridge, accomplished by the City's highway personnel in January 1984, was completed within a single weekend to reduce inconvenience to the public.

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC OF PROPOSED RATE INCREASE BY CONTINENTAL TELEPHONE COMPANY OF VIRGINIA

On April 6, 1984, Continental Telephone Company of Virginia ("Continental") filed with the Virginia State Corporation Commission an application to increase its rates and charges for Virginia local telephone service by approximately $19.6 million and to increase its intrastate carrier access charges by approximately $4.3 million to be effective May 6, 1984. Continental's figures indicate that the application, if approved, would result in increases in basic monthly rates for residential customers ranging from $2.50 to $7.80 per month and for business customers, increases ranging from $4.40 to $17.65 per month. Persons interested in the proposed allocation of the increase among customer classes should review Continental's application and the accompanying materials filed with the application.

Continental's filing was completed May 8, 1984. Continental's proposed tariffs have been suspended to and through October 5, 1984, or until further order of the Commission.

The Virginia State Corporation Commission has scheduled a public hearing on Continental's application in its 13th Floor Courtroom, Jefferson Building, Bank and Governor Streets, Richmond, Virginia commencing at 10:00 a.m., September 5, 1984, for the purpose of receiving statements from public witnesses and considering evidence submitted by the parties. Copies of the application, together with Continental's supporting data, are available for public inspection during normal business hours at Continental offices where bills may be paid and in the Commission's Document Control Center, located on Floor B-1 of the Jefferson Building, Richmond, Virginia and open Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

On or before July 10, 1984, any person who expects to submit evidence and to cross-examine Continental and Commission witnesses must file with the Commission an original and fifteen (15) copies of a Notice of Protest conforming to Rule 5:16(a) of the Commission's Rules of Practice and Procedure. A copy of this notice must be mailed to Continental's counsel, John W. Riely, Esquire, Hunton and Williams, P. O. Box 1535, Richmond, Virginia 23212.

On or before August 13, 1984, all persons who have filed a Notice of Protest and who expect to participate in the hearing as a Protestant must file with the Commission a Protest, together with an original and fifteen (15) copies of all prepared testimony and exhibits of the witnesses to be offered at the hearing. Protestants must serve a copy of the protest and testimony upon all other parties.

On or before August 21, 1984, the Commission's Staff shall file with the Clerk of the Commission fifteen (15) copies of the prepared testimony and exhibits of each witness expected to present direct testimony and will serve a copy upon Continental and all parties.

Any interested person, not otherwise participating as a Protestant, who desires to make a statement at the public hearing in his own behalf on the application, need only be present in the Commission's Courtroom 15 minutes prior to the commencement of the hearing and inform the Commission's Bailiff that he wishes to speak. All persons desiring to speak will be heard as expeditiously as possible beginning at 10:00 a.m. or shortly thereafter. In lieu of attending the public hearing, public witnesses may choose to send their comments to the Commission in written form. Such comments must be received no later than August 30, 1984.

All written comments to the Commission concerning Continental's application should refer to Case Nol. PUC840009 and should be addressed to William C. Young, Clerk, Document Control Center, P. O. Box 2118, Richmond, Virginia 23216.

Rudee's wins Worrell 1000

Twelve days, 1000 miles

Team Rudee's of Virginia Beach finished first in the annual Worrell 1000 Hobie Cat race from Fort Lauderdale, Florida to Virginia Beach. The winning Hobie Cat was sailed by 32 year old Dean Froome and Enriquo Figueroa, 20, and sponsored by Bill Jenkins, owner of Rudee's Restaurant. The 12-day race ended this past weekend, with an appreciative crowd awaiting landfall of the weary sailors.

Winners—Enriquo Figueroa and Dean Froome (in glasses), assisted by Bill Jenkins (in hat); pull their boat ashore to make room for other finishers.

Happy, but wet—Bill Jenkins, owner of Rudee's Restaurant, member of the ground crew, alternate sailor and sponsor of the boat gets tossed in the ocean by a jubilant crew.

The Lighter Side

The Hint Man

By CHUCK FAULKNER

Soap Pads - Cut soap pads into quarters. They'll still do the job and, over the course of a year. vou'll save a lot of money. Why waste them?

Soap Saver - Save all small pieces of soap. When you have quite a few pieces, tie them into a piece of flannel and dip it in boiling water. After a few minutes, the soap pieces will soften to a jelly. Plunge them into very cold water and, as it cools down, form a ball with the soap pieces still inside the flannel. Let it firm completely, remove the flannel covering, and you have inexpensive soap.

Soft Drink Stains, Removing - If the stains are fresh (moist), place the material under the cold water tap and let the water run through. Work the material between the fingers till stains disappear. Wash in cold, soapy water.

Note: Never use hot water; it sets the stains.

If the stain is an old, dry stain, soak the affected area in equal parts of cold water and alcohol for twenty minutes. Now wash in cold, sudsy water.

Soup, Cooking - "Soup boiled is soup SPOILED!" It should be simmered gently and evenly.

Soup, Flavoring - If making vegetable soup, add one fourth teaspoon of nutmeg to enrich the flavor, or add half a fresh apple, chopped, to give the vegetable soup a delicious flavor.

Soup, Greasy - Skim the surface with a large lettuce leaf, or put two ice cubes in a piece of cheesecloth and drag it across the soup.

Soup, Keeping - Never let it cool in a covered pot, and never keep it in a warm area or it will quickly sour. Pour it into the desired container, let it cool, then cover and keep in a cool place.

Soup, Thin - Add a little grated cheddar cheese. It will improve the flavor immensely.

Soup, Too Salty - Add a teaspoonful of sugar or a few small pieces of raw turnip.

Or grate a raw potato into the soup.

Soup Seasoning - Always add seasonings very gradually so you won't over-flavor.

Not all of THE LOST COLONY's colorful spectacle happens on-stage. Here, technicians prepare to test the fireworks that light up the sky twice each night during Paul Green's famous outdoor drama about the founding of the first English colony in the "new world." THE LOST COLONY play nightly except Sunday through late August on Roanoke Island, NC. For more information call 919-473-2127.

Dance for special people to be held

A dance for physically and mentally handicapped people will be held Saturday, June 16, from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. Location will be at the Bow Creek Recreation Center, 3427 Clubhouse Road, Virginia Beach. The dance will be sponsored by the Fraternal Order of UDT/SEAL, the Virginia Beach Department of Parks and Recreation, and CLASP (Citizens Loving All Special People).

Participation is free. Refreshments will be served and door prizes will be given. The latest hits will be played. Parents and guardians are welcome, however, chaperones are present at all times.

Transportation is available from your area; however, for planning purposes we must know by June 7 if you desire transportation. Please call Carolyn Wismer at 853-8789 after 7 p.m.

For further information call either Gini Hiben on 340-0407 or Barbara Dauphinee or 340-5817.

"The Lost Colony" staff is its backbone

By its very nature, the performers in any play or stage entertainment get most if not all of the attention. The spot light literally shines on them. But who could even see that performer if the spot light operator wasn't in his or her place, well trained and ready to throw some light on the subject?

Even the most starry-eyed audience is probably not unaware that it takes many unseen people -- technicians, stage hands, musicians, the "house" staff, etc.--to make a play work, to showcase the performers so that they can do their very best to entertain and enthrall.

With a show as big and complex as "The Lost Colony" outdoor drama, not only is the number of crew and staff membrs large indeed, but their background and expertise must be on a level equal to the artisitic quality of Paul Green's famous words and Joe Layton's handsome physical production. A brief survey of some -- but hardly all -- of the technicians, their jobs and their various hometowns will give the uniniated some idea of the scope of "mounting" and running "The Lost Colony" in addition to the lengths general manager Robert Knowles and production stage manager Lynn Lockrow must go to fill these positions with qualified personnel.

Working directly under Lockrow's supervision are various crews and department heads that include stage managers Jim Fineman of Manteo, N.C. and Ann Turner of New Bern, N.C.. Property master Amy Westrich, from Eau Claire, WI, joins the production this summer. She will be assisted by Diane DePalma of Kernersville, N.C.

Robert Fearn of Raleigh, as master carpenter, supervises two dozen actor/technicians who must deal with maintaining and "shifting" the heavy and complex scenery designed by Fred Voelpel.

Voelpel's hundreds of costumes are built and maintained by veteran costumer Irene Rains, this year joined by newcomer Vicki King of Lexington, N.C. Their wardrobe staff includes Lisa Buckley of Chesapeake, VA; Allison Griner of Hunstville, AL; Kevin Hoffman of Dallas, NC; Rachael Scheib of Killen, AL; Doc Winston of Colonial Heights, VA; and Donna Yates of Claysville, PA.

Operating the hundreds of lighting instruments and delicate switching equipment that realize Nananne Porcher's lighting design are chief electrician Peter Phillips of Greenville, NC; second electrician John Hart of Raleigh; and swing electrician Colleen Kingdom of Indian Rocks Beach, FL. Operating the crucial follow spots are Reese Sumner of Carrboro, NC, and Jo Johnson of Green Bay, WI. Margi Heiple of Jennerstown, PA, is sound technician.

An administrative and house staff numbering over thirty completes the support staff that, with the technicians noted above, sets up the scenery, prepares the costumes, lights the stage and cues all the action in the lavish Joe Layton production of Paul Green's "The Lost Colony."

This year -- the drama's forty-fourth production season -- "The Lost Colony" will run from June 15 to September 1. For more information call (919) 473-3414.

"Dutch Treat Beef Stew" wins Virginia beef cook-off

A Virginia recipe with a Dutch accent took top honors at the Virginia Beef Cook-Off held May 19 at James Madison University in Harrisonburg. The contest, now in its sixth year, is sponsored by the Virginia Cattlewoman.

Adapted from a recipe of the Five Flies Restaurant in Amsterdam, "Dutch Treat Beef Stew" won Patricia M. Churchman of Bridgewater $100 and the right to represent the state at the National Beef Cook-Off in Albuquerque, N.M., September 9-11.

"I was flabbergasted," Mrs. Churchman said. "I had never entered a recipe contest before." She said a friend had given her the recipe and she had liked the unusual combination of sour cherries with the beef.

A former director of publicity for Bridgewater College, Mrs. Churchman has four children and two grandchildren. She is also president of the Blue Ridge Chapter of the Virginia Head Injury Association, which she helped establish after her son was injured in an accident.

Asked if cooking was a hobby, Mrs. Churchman said, "Not after cooking every day for 30 years for this family!" She said she had developed great skills as a short-order cook, adding that her family's dining style ranged from "very informal to very spontaneous."

Winning second place and $75 in the Virginia Beef Cook-Off was Mrs. W.M. Vaughan of Richmond with "Fiesta Beef Roundup." Mrs. Ann Kahan of Stuart won third place and $50 with "Reuben Roast."

Final recipes for the contest were selected by home economists with the Virginia Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services. Judging of the prepared dishes was conducted by a panel of food professionals on the day of the Cook-Off.

Beach businessmen honored

Productivity—Daniel I. Rhode, president of Sparks Tune-Up, presents a "Highest Productivity Award" to Kenneth Greene (r) of Virginia Beach at the recent national franchise company's Inaugural Convention at the Opryland Hotel in Nashville. The award was for centers which opened during the last quarter of 1983, and had the highest gross sales during the first quarter of 1984.

Management—Jerry Stacy (c), operations manager of Sparks Tune-Up, a national franchise chain, presents and "Operations Manager's Award" to Charles and Bernice Kaplan of Virginia Beach at the company's convention at the Opryland Hotel.

Kellam honored by contractors

The Tidewater Utility Contractors Association will celebrate its 10th anniversary and will present its first "Distinguished Citizen Award" at its general membership meeting to be held on June 6, at the Holiday Inn Executive Center on Greenwich Road in Virginia Beach.

Recipient of the award is Sidney Kellam of Virginia Beach, who for many years was active politically on the local, state, and national scene.

Kellam's activities and influence go back to the founding of what is now the city with the largest population in the state.

Tidewater Utility Contractors Association established in 1974, includes among its membership, seventy member firms associated with the utility construction industry. The association is affiliated nationally with the Washington, D.C. based National Utility Contractors Association, which has more than 2,000 member firms.

R. G. Moore building 18th TBA scholarship house

The R.G. Moore Building Co. of Virginia Beach recently began construction on the 18th Tidewater Builders Association Scholarship House.

Located in Virginia Beach's Salem Woods Subdivision, the colonial-style house is scheduled for completion by mid-summer. It will then be sold at a fair market price and the net proceeds will go to TBA's Scholarship Foundation.

Each year since 1966, a TBA builder has volunteered to build a scholarship house using materials, services and labor donated by dozens of association members. Hundreds of academically and financially deserving local students have benefitted from the sale of these homes since that time.

The foundation is now one of the largest sources of scholarship aid in Tidewater, and this year awarded grants in excess of $45,000.

During a recent ground breaking ceremony, Dr. Alfred B. Rollins, Jr., guest speaker, commended area builders such as Moore for their generous support of higher education. Rollins is president of Old Dominion University.

TBA is a non-profit trade organization representing more than 10,000 people in the residential construction industry in Chesapeake, Norfolk, Portsmouth, Suffolk and Virginia Beach.

What to look for in adjustable rate mortgages

To identify the real bargains on adjustable rate mortgages, said William Hogan, vice president of Loan Express, a Virginia-based national mortgage banking service, look for three characteristices:

First, does the loan have an annual rate cap of two points or lower, and a life-of-the-loan cap of five points or less (i.e., the rate can never increase faster than 2 percent per year, and can never end up higher than five points beyond the first-year rate)? Life caps of 3 to 4 percentage points are now being offered by some New England lenders, and the trend could spread elsewhere.

Second, is the "margin" on the adjustable between 1.5 and 3 percentage points (the margin being the extra annual charge of "spread" tacked onto the one-year Treasury bill index base by the lender)? Although often ignored by consumers, the margin stays with the loan forever, and is the key to the lender's profits. Some margins go above 3 percentage points and add significantly to second-and-later-year "payment shocks" that hit unsuspecting buyers.

Third are the "points" up-front low? If you're simply paying for all your caps and other benefits with a heavy dose of fees at the front end of the loan, notes Hogan, you're not getting a bargain. "You may not be getting ripped off either," he adds, "but we're talking about bargains."

Many lenders are phasing out their true adjustable-rate bargains, panelists noted, because they've now decided they're giving away too much to the consumer (via low rates) to merit the risks.

"We all know that adjustables have higher default rates than fixed-rate loans," said one panelist representing a large, national, home-loan underwriter. "So lenders are raising the effective prices they charge on the short-term loans."

Toy Warden

Warden named

Century 21 Real Estate recently announced the opening of their newest member -- Century 21 Affordable Homes Realty. The 1200 square foot facility is located at 1192 South Lynnhaven Parkway in Virginia Beach. It opened officially on June 1.

Century 21 Affordable Homes Realty is owned and managed by Toy Warden, a five-year real estate veteran. Warden was formerly with Century 21 William Farmer Realtors in Virginia Beach.

The firm will specialize in residential re-sales, new homes, rentals, waterfront and vacation properties, commercial homes, rentals, waterfront and vacation properties, commercial sales, investments, property management, and corporate-military relocation. They plan to service the entire metro Tidewater area.

Cardiovascular specialist

Martin to head new Diagnostic service

Dr. Randolph P. Martin has been named medical director of Doctors' Diagnostic Services. The appointment was made by the board of directors of AccuCare Corp., DDS's parent company.

Dr. Martin is a world renowned innovator in noninvasive cardiovascular medicine. Previously he held positions as director of the Noninvasive Cardiovascular Laboratory and medical director of the Cardiac Rehabilitation Treatment Center, both at the University of Virginia School of Medicine. Most recently, Dr. Martin maintained a private practice in Charlottesville.

DDS houses the most advanced and sophisticated cardiology, neurology, and pulmonary diagnostic equipment in the Eastern United States, and the only Doppler echocardiography system in existence. Its setting allows physicians and technologists to perform diagnostic testing in a comfortable patient atmosphere with significantly faster response time than is the norm.

Dr. Randolph Martin

Dr. Martin is one of the developers of the Doppler echocardiography system, which combines the speed and technology of computers with sound echo (sonar) technology. It shows real-time computer-generated pictures of a patient's heart from any perspective (internal, external and segmented).

Dr. Martin and his family will reside in Virginia Beach.

Recycling plant adds collection

Reynolds Aluminum Recycling Company will increase its Tidewater area operations this summer by opening its Virginia Beach recycling center an additional day each week, and by adding a new collection point in Norfolk.

"This gives Reynolds a total of six aluminum recycling collection points in the Tidewater area," Tork MacCorkle, manager of the Reynolds Aluminum recycling center in Virginia Beach, pointed out. "We want to make it as convenient as possible for people to recycle."

Beginning this past Saturday, June 2, and continuing each Saturday thereafter, a Reynolds Aluminum recycling mobile unit will be stationed at the Giant Open Air, 350 Campostella Road in Norfolk, from 9:30 a.m. until noon.

Starting the following Monday, June 4, the Reynolds Aluminum recycling center at 1435 Air Rail Avenue in Virginia Beach will be open from Monday through Saturday, 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. The center had previously been open Tuesday through Saturday.

Reynolds buys clean all-aluminum beverage cans and other clean household aluminum products such as pie plates, foil, frozen food and dinner trays, and dip, pudding and meat containers. Reynolds also purchases miscellaneous items such as siding, gutters, storm door and window frames, and lawn furniture tubing. These items should be free of any non-aluminum items, cut to lengths not exceeding three feet, bundled and not mixed with cans. Reynolds also purchases cast aluminum for recycling.

For more information, call the Virginia Beach recycling center at 460-0923 or call the Reynolds toll-free nationwide recycling number, 1-800-228-2525.

Blaine named instructor at Stihl

Jerry C. Blaine

Jerry C. Blaine is the new technical service instructor at Stihl Incorporated in Virginia Beach. Through Stihl's regular series of safety/service schools, Blaine will provide safety and technical instruction to dealer and distributor service personnel.

Formerly the service, warranty and parts manager at Stihl distributor Minnesota Stihl Inc. in Brainerd, Minnesota, Blaine also served as service manager at the Coast Sports Store there. He attended Pennsylvania Military College in Chester, Pennsylvania and the University of Maryland's European division.

Originally from Brainerd, Blaine now lives in Virginia Beach with his wife and two-year-old twins, Zachary and Tiffany.

Firm names Beacher project estimator

Richard Donovan has been named Project Estimator for Snow Jr. & King, Inc., Norfolk-based masonry contractors. The announcement was made today by T. Michael Snow, president.

As Project Estimator, Donovan will be responsible for processing and pricing all changes made to original contract work and coordinating manpower to implement changes.

Donovan recently graduated from Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University with a degree in building construction. He will be temporarily stationed in Winston-Salem, North Carolina where the company has a masonry contract on a major manufacturing plant. Upon project completion, Donovan will be based in Snow Jr. & King's Norfolk office. He will be responsible for estimates on future masonry projects. Donovan resides in Virginia Beach.

Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion (Bedford and Roanoke), and Company D (Roanoke), the heavy weapons company for the battalion, suffered much more heavily from enemy fire. They came ashore on the extreme right of the beach where Company A had suffered so terribly. It took over two hours for some of these men to reach dry ground, and they landed without most of their guns and ammunition. Once again the cliffs proved insurmountable.

Companies K (Charlottesville), I (Winchester), and L (Staunton), like Company C, all landed in reasonably good shape on the left on the regiment's sector. They immediately linked up with the remnants of earlier waves and fought their way to the top of the bluffs to the east of the village of Les Moulins.

By nine in the morning these Virginians had succeeded in making a second penetration of the beach defenses and were able to start the liberation of France.

Ten minutes after the third wave landed, the remaining elements of the regiment began landing. These included the 3d Battalion's Headquarters Company (Winchester) and Company M (Emporia), the Anti-tank (Roanoke) and Cannon Companies, and the Medical Detachment (Wytheville and Staunton). They also included

Colonel Charles Canham, who commanded the regiment despite a painful wound, his headquarters company from Staunton and Roanoke, and the 29th Signal Company (Norfolk).

The final Virginia element which landed in the assault phase of D-Day was the 111th Field Artillery Battalion from Richmond, Norfolk, and Portsmouth. Their dozen howitzers were supposed to provide artillery support for the 116th. Unfortunately, the amphibious trucks (DUKWs) transporting the guns to the beach either were hit by enemy fire or swamped by waves. The cannoneers under the command of Lieutenant Colonel Thornton Mullins landed without their pieces near Les Moulins at 8:30. Gathering his dazed men, Mullins informed them "To Hell with our artillery mission, we're infantrymen now!" A sniper soon killed the colonel, but his troops assisted their fellow Virginians in the drive inland.

By nightfall Americans were in control of the key terrain at Omaha Beach, although pockets of German resistance remained. Men of the "Stonewall Brigade" sacrificed themselves to liberate a handful of Norman villages: 341 killed, 241 wounded, and 26 missing in action. The regiment received both the Presidential Unit Citation (Army) and the French Croix de Guerre for its D-Day heroism. In the process they had begun a new chapter in the regiment's proud history, a chapter which would carry them through St. Lo and Brest to the Elbe River by the end of World War II.

'Nuclear Winter' study launched

Senator John W. Warner (R-VA) has cosponsored an amendment that would initiate a comprehensive study of the so-called "nuclear winter" phenomenon -- the atmospheric, climatic, environmental and biological consequences of nuclear war.

"It is essential that we have a clear understanding of the implications that such consequences have for the nuclear weapons strategy and policy and the arms control and civil defense policies of the U.S.," said Warner.

Scientists who have studied the possible effects of a nuclear exchange conclude that a nuclear exchange would have disastrous climatic and ecological consequences. They have coined the term "nuclear winter" to refer to the extreme cold and dark that would ensue from nuclear explosions sending large amounts of soot, smoke and dust into the atmosphere.

"While the images of a nuclear exchange are frightening to all of us, if we are to deal wisely with this question we must know what effects these weapons would have and how those effects should shape our policy," said Warner.

Warner, a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, is cosponsoring a committee amendment to the fiscal 1985 Defense Authorization Bill introduced by Sen. Bill Cohen (R-Maine) that directs the Secretary of Defense to conduct a thorough study of nuclear winter.

The amendment calls for the Secretary to submit a report to the Senate and House Armed Services Committees by March 1, 1985.

Specifically, the report would provide:

- a detailed review and assessment of current scientific studies and findings on the atmospheric, climatic, environmental, and biological consequences of nuclear explosions and nuclear exchanges.
- a thorough evaluation of the implications that the current studies and findings have on (a) the nuclear weapons policy of the U.S., especially with regard to strategy, targeting, planning, command, control, procurement, and deployment; (b) the nuclear arms control policy; and, (c) civil defense policy of the U.S.
- a discussion of the manner in which the results of such evaluation of policy implications will be incorporated into the nuclear weapons, arms control, and civil defense policies of the U.S.
- an analysis of the extent to which current scientific findings on the consequences of nuclear explosions and nuclear exchanges are being studied, disseminated, and utilized in the Soviet Union.

Warner, chairman of the Subcommittee on Strategic and Theater Nuclear Forces, said that while scientific evidence suggests that the effects of a major nuclear exchange would be catastrophic, recent studies indicate that even a small-scale nuclear exchange could produce similar results.

"These findings are particularly relevant in view of suggestions by some people that a limited nuclear exchange could be an acceptable or survivable exercise," said Warner.

Wasps help Virginia farmers

Tiny parasitic wasps are helping Virginia small grain and soybean farmers rid their fields of destructive pests.

A Virginia Tech entomologist reported that thousands of wasps were released recently in 43 Virginia counties to battle Mexican bean and cereal leaf beetles.

"When people hear the word 'wasp', they often think of swarms of stinging hornets," said Edwin Rajotee. "The wasps being released actually are tiny stingless creatures that live off other insects by laying eggs in them.

"Farmers probably will never see the wasps, but they certainly will notice their effects," he added. "Every year more farmers participate in the program, and each year they need fewer pesticides." The wasp release is one component of the integrated pest management program being used in Virginia.

Ten years ago, the Mexican bean beetle was the major soybean pest in Virginia. Today, it's populations are low. "This trend isn't solely attributable to the release of wasps, but they've certainly played a major role," Rajotte said.

Soybean farmers who want to introduce wasps to their field first must provide a nurse crop, a small early planting of snap beans and soybeans next to the rest of their acreage that will attract a large number of beetles.

The county agent then releases the wasps in the nurse crop, which provides an ideal environment for their breeding and survival. As the wasp population grows, it spreads out over a wider area.

Release of wasps that attack cereal leaf beetles is a newer project, beginning in 1978. The best results occurred in the Shenandoah Valley, where more than 60 percent of the beetle eggs and larvae have been destroyed in many locations. Along the eastern and southeastern areas of the state, parasitism has reached only four to 20 percent of the beetle eggs and larvae, but rates are on the rise.

"In several years, the wasps will be keeping the cereal leaf beetle population below the point where farmers need to spray," Rajotee said.

For further information on wasp releases, farmers should contact their local Extension office.

Sisisky joins crime caucus

Rep. Norman Sisisky has announced he has become a member of the Congressional Crime Caucus, formed to address one of the most serious problems facing this nation.

The caucus, which currently has 59 House and 20 Senate members, is bi-partisan.

The caucus, chaired by U.S. Sen. Arlen Specter (R-PA) and U.S. Rep. William Hughes (D-NJ), will work to sharpen the congressional focus on critical criminal justice problems, such as career criminals, justice assistance, prison overcrowding, plea bargaining, court congestion, disparity in sentencing, outdated bail laws, early parole, job training for prisoners and alternatives to incarceration.

"There has been no major crime legislation enacted by Congress since 1970. Often a bill will pass one house, but not the other. By forming this joint caucus, the likelihood of a bill passing both the House and Senate will increase," Sisisky explained.

A priority of the Congressional Crime Caucus will be to identify long-term and innovative legislation that would command broad, bi-partisan support and have a major impact on fighting crime.

"The magnitude of the crime problem threatens to break down the very structure of our criminal justice system," stated Sisisky.

With the emergence of computers and the age of electronic superiority, children can now learn to use video as an art form. Several classes being taught by Susan Stevenson will teach children to "see" electronically. Susan is no stranger to the special needs of children. She has been an arts and crafts director for Camp SummerLife, a youth group adviser and drama coach, as well as having participated in a Girl Scout Wider Opportunity project. Her class will offer a hands-on opportunity to discover and explore how video images can be created through the magic of video. Children will also explore a unique video art form using cathode ray imagery, and work on a collaborative creation of a video artwork that explores the magical effects of the cathode ray.

Mary Crouch is an art teacher at Kingston Elementary School. She has been with the Virginia Beach School system for five years after leaving the public school system in Savannah, Georgia. Mary will be teaching a variety of classes including "Beach Expressions," which will explore the gestures, colors, textures and forms found in summer by the seaside, and "Flying and Floating," a class in which children will learn the history of flying machines and create their own soaring gadgets of the future. Another class she will teach is "A World of Art" in which students will study and create the art of foreign lands. They will learn the history of Japanese screens, for instance, and make their own. The last day of class will be a guided tour of The Chrysler Museum at Norfolk, highlighting the countries studied during the course.

"I want the children to have fun in class and feel free in expressing themselves," says Jackie Merritt, the 1983-84 Artist-in-Residence for the Virginia Beach City Schools. Jackie, who will be teaching several drawing and painting classes, enjoys working with kids and has done numerous children's workshops. Her portraiture classes will deal with how children envision themselves through the use of life-sized portraits and family portraits. Children will also learn how to go from a line drawing to a finsihed painting.

ArtCamp classes meet Monday through Fridays, from 9 to 10:30 a.m. and/or 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Each week is a new session. Classes are available for two age groups, seven to nine year olds and 10 to 12 year olds.

If your child is interested in taking one or more of the classes outline, or if you are interested in additional information, please call the Virginia Beach Arts Center at 425-0000. The Arts Center is located at 1711 Arctic Avenue, three blocks from the oceanfront.

Next Week: ArtCamp continued—Photography, clowning, silkscreen and more.

Summer day care offered

The Boys Club of Virginia Beach, 4441 South Boulevard, (in the United Way Family Center near Mt. Trashmore), is offering summer day care for boys between the ages of seven and 16.

The program includes swimming and sports, as well as other activities and trips, classes and horse back riding camps as options. For more information call 499-2311.

the existence of libraries. Travelling from the Isle of Skye southward toward the Border, I saw several small blue library vans. I must admit, however, that the sight of them was not compelling enough to stop and take a picture and I hurried by. Toward the end of the first week, however, I began noticing libraries more often. I was prompted to send my staff a post card of Blair Atholl Castle with a suggestion of the appropriateness of its baronial architecture and cannons for the central library. Oxford has a new central library which I passed while shopping. I admired the Radcliffe Camera and the Bodleian from the outside and found myself fascinated by the fact that a series of tracks had been laid under the High Street so that books from one building could be transferred to the other easily. In winter weather this tunnel keeps the sidewalks clear of snow and ice. The afternoon, however, found me in Blackwell's Bookstore recovering from my pint of Old Hooky and shepherd's pie. I bought a book!

I spent the last several days in Burford with my parents, who are spending several months there. A Cotswold village near Oxford, Burford's main street is lined with yellow stone buildings containing pubs and shops, some dating from the 1400's. One of these windows was that of the Burford branch of the county library. My mother, a retired high school librarian, had wasted no time in finding the nearest library and registering. Upon joining, she was issued a certain number of "tokens" which she could exchange for books. She could only check out as many books as she had tokens, an interesting means of inventory control. I was intrigued. Still, I found myself able to do no more than look through the window when passing by. I continued to read my book from Blackwell's.

I found myself, finally, on the return plane with what I thought were few of those envisioned gems. The customs officer in Boston asked my occupation. I told him, somewhat defiantly as usual. He kept asking questions. Was I school or public, municipal or state? I thought it an odd conversation. He did not, however, open my suitcases and seemed only moderately astonished that I had only one bottle of Scotch and no food. I didn't mention the five books I'd bought. He did bring my mind abruptly back to libraries and the very real necessity to write this article about something. There are libraries in England and Scotland. I acknowledged their existence mostly from a distance. I'm glad to be back and I'm ready to be inside a library again. I'm still reading my book from Blackwells.

that each boat/boaters combination fall into and National Safe Boating Week is a good time to look into safety equipment that may not be required by law, but that the prudent boater may want to have aboard.

The most obvious recommendation for all boaters is that they have those items over and above the federal requirements needed to pass the coast guard auxiliary's courtesy marine examination. Recommended items for all boats include an anchor of suitable size with plenty of line and chain, and a bailer, either a pump or a scoop. These are items of basic safety equipment which provide a first line of defense in case of an emergency on the water. Also in this category is a paddle or oar for any boat under 16 feet in length to provide alternate means of propulsion.

In boats 16 feet or more in length, the auxiliary courtesy examiner will look for working navigation lights, whether the boat is intended to stay out after sunset or not. This is to ensure that the boat will be seen should mechanical problems prevent getting back to the dock before dark.

Although not on the auxiliary courtesy marine examination list of safety equipment, a medical kit is also a desirable item. Medical kits vary from not much more than a box of band aids and sunburn lotion to a complete surgical kit. The extent of your medical kit should be dictated by how far you will be away from professional medical care and any known medical problems you and your crew may have.

Next week: spare parts, navigation and survival rations.

Susan Robertson of Virginia Beach, a Radford University art major, won first place in the drawing and graphics division of the recent Longwood Fine Arts Show, a part of Farmville's Heart of Virginia Festival.

Robertson, a junior, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hollis Robertson of Stratford Chase.

UPPER WOLFSNARE

Historic landmark opens

Upper Wolfsnare, the restored Historical Landmark which belongs to the Princess Anne County Historical Society will be open to the public every Wednesday beginning June 6 and continuing through August, from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m., excepting July 4.

The house was built in 1759 by Thomas Walke III, whose grandfather, Thomas Walke I, came to Virginia from Barbados in 1662. It is on the National Register of Historic Places. Mr. & Mrs. Alan Taylor are the present curators and continue the restoration, now in its 13th year.

The Cornicks were another prominent Princess Anne County family who later owned the house, and two generations of Cornicks lived there. The chain of title includes some 18 other owners through the years.

To get to Upper Wolfsnare take First Colonial Road south to Potters Road, or head south on Great Neck Road to Potters Road. The entrance is at 2040 Potters Road between these two points.

Admission is $1 for adults, or 50 cents for children and senior citizens.

of 634 compared to a median of $348 for cities in the 200,000 to 299,999 population range, and $474 for cities in the 300,000 to 499,999 population range. The gross debt figures for Virginia Beach are similarly high--$891 compared to $484 and $609.

Two other measures considered are direct net debt and gross debt on relation to estimated fair value. In all four measures, Virginia Beach is higher than median.

Government Finance Associates recommends the city not increase its debt ratios above the current level and over time reduce its ratio to the median level.

In answer to a question from Mayor Louis R. Jones, Rush said that if all the city's surplus ($25 million last year) were used for the Gaston project, it would affect the city's credit rating.

Oberndorf asked about adding a few cents to the real estate tax for the capital cost. This additional tax would be removed when the debt was retired.

Rush replied that in the special assessment district plan the increase is tied to the debt.

Oberndorf asked whether this tax could be deducted from an individual's Federal or State income taxes, something she had previously suggested.

Rush said the legality of this is not clear.

Oberndorf also pointed out that in Virginia Beach one of the major users, the Federal government, has a special water rate.

Oberndorf said that in considering water rates, the city would have to consider all the other utility rates borne by citizens, sewer fee, maintenance fee and the Hampton Roads Sanitation District fee. She said it's easy to talk about capital costs but people get "confused and irate."

Rush pointed out that a "major facilities equalization charge" could be used to include new entities in the paying process. Also, former agricultural land converted to development uses would be charged up front once hooked up to the water system.

Rush said that one of the major risks in a referendum is not providing enough funds to complete the project. He cautioned Council to assure itself that the amount being requested is high enough to cover the entire project.

Seventh straight year

State Bar annual meeting at Beach

Virginia Supreme Court Chief Justice Harry L. Carrico and Los Angeles Herald Examiner Editor Mary Anne Dolan, a nationally known journalist, will culminate proceedings at the 46th Annual Meeting of the Virginia State Bar with separate addresses at the annual luncheon on Saturday, June 16, at 1 p.m. at the Cavalier Hotel Beach Club in Virginia Beach.

The chief justice will be a featured speaker at the luncheon for the second straight year, and his remarks will focus on the timely subject of professionalism and the public image of lawyers.

Dolan's remarks will be on a related subject and equally timely, focusing on lawyer-media relations and the public image of the legal profession, primarily as it relates to the recently published Hearst Corporation survey on the public's level of familiarity with the judicial system.

The Hearst survey, issued last year, uncovered a number of surprising, even disturbing, findings regarding public knowledge of the courts system. It revealed, for example, that 50 percent of those surveyed believe that a defendant must prove his innocence in a criminal trial, while only 46 percent of those surveyed realize that the burden of proof lies with the state, or prosecuting attorney.

In addition to the scheduled remarks by Carrico and Ms. Dolan, the VSB Annual Meeting will feature professional development workshops on topical issues in various fields of law on Friday, June 15, and a panel program on Saturday, June 16, entitled "Making Partner in the 80s - Just How Far Have We Come?"

This program will focus on the process in which associates become partners in law firms, and a portion of the program will explore how the recent decision of the U.S. Supreme Court in the Hishon v. King & Spalding case may affect the process of partner selection, both in terms of women associates and associates in general.

The Virginia State Bar Annual Meeting, June 14-17, will be conducted for the seventh straight year in Virginia Beach, at the Cavalier and Holiday Inn hotels. This year's attendance figure is expected to surpass that of last year, which featured a record turnout of nearly 640 Virginia lawyers and judges who, with their spouses, families and guests, ballooned the total attendance figure to more than 1,400 persons.

Managed growth

"The Green Line" debate to continue

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

A public discussion Monday afternoon on "The Green Line" reveals chiefly the complexity of the question of how the City of Virginia Beach should grow.

The line divides what have been considered to be the growth and the agricultural areas of the city. However, this division is not clearcut and numerous questions arose among Council members about where the line is exactly, whether there was a second line or whether the line could be expanded to include a transition area.

Councilwoman Nancy Creech concluded that although everyone likes specific answers, planning is not an exact science. "We will never make an exact science of urban planning and land use," she said. Achieving the greatest return for the greatest level of services, she said, would be a difficult task.

Citizens were also assured that they would be allowed imput in the review of the Comprehensive Plan now under way in which "The Green Line" is a top consideration. Councilman John A. Baum said that apparently some citizens had a misconception of an executive session on the matter the previous week. He said that Council had the session to discuss legal ramifications of rezoning and downzoning. He said the discussion was scheduled for this week because members thought a more public discussion was needed. "I don't think anyone's trying to get around anybody," he said.

Mayor Louis R. Jones added that no effort is being made by Council to prevent public hearings. He said that, in fact, the only reason the item was on the agenda on Monday was to bring the problem out in the open.

Lawyers to learn

"High-tech" center one of nine programs offered

Virginia's recently announced "high-tech" center, the Center for Innovative Technology, and its impact on the state and its lawyers will be the focus of one of the nine programs offered by Virginia State Bar sections on Friday, June 15, during the 46th Annual Meeting of the VSB, in Virginia Beach.

The state bar currently has 13 sections, each of which consists of Virginia lawyers interested in a specific field of law.

Two state bar sections, the International Law Section and the Patent, Trademark and Copyright Law Section, will sponsor the program on "Virginia's New 'High Tech' Center - Its Impact on the Commonwealth and Its Lawyers" (10:30 a.m., Cape Henry Room, Holiday Inn).

Three different aspects of this topic - "The High Tech Explosion: Virginia's Role," "The Role of the Federal Government in High Tech" and "The Role of the Virginia Lawyer in High Tech" - will be explored during the program by various legal, technical, business and government authorities in the field of high technology.

Discussing Virginia's role in the high technology explosion will be Dr. John J. Salley, interim director of the Virginia Center for Innovative Technology (CIT) and vice-president for research and dean of graduate studies at Virginia Commonwealth University in Richmond.

The role of the Virginia lawyer in the high technology explosion will be covered by a panel of six lawyers. Panelists for this portion of the program will be John McCabe, vice-president and assistant general counsel for BDM International, Inc. in McLean; Gary M. Hoffman, the incoming vice-chairman of the VSB's Patent, Trademark & Copyright Law Section and an Arlington lawyer; Jan Jancin, past president of the American Patent Law Association and currently with the IBM Corporation in Arlington; James A. Jones, III, a Richmond lawyer who was a key figure in the establishment of the Virginia Center for Innovative Technology; K. Stewart Evans, Jr., a Fairfax lawyer, who has been very active in exploring the role of the CIT in the high tech area; and Donald H. Seifman, a Washington, DC lawyer

William D. Dolan, III

Now president-elect

Arlington lawyer to take office as new president of State Bar

Arlington lawyer William D. Dolan, III, 40, will be installed as the new President of the 17,800-member Virginia State Bar on Saturday, June 16, during the 46th Annual Meeting of the State Bar, in Virginia Beach.

Dolan, currently President-elect of the State Bar, will receive his gavel as the incoming President for 1984-85, succeeding Alex T. Mayo, Jr. of Norfolk, during the annual luncheon at the Cavalier Oceanfront Hotel's Beach Club.

Under Virginia State Bar bylaws, the President-elect automatically ascends to the office of President at the close of the Annual Meeting following the one at which he or she is chosen as President-elect. Both offices carry a one-year term.

Born in Washington, DC, and raised in Arlington, Dolan attended Georgetown Univesity and then Marquette University in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, where he received his bachelor of arts degree in 1967. He received his law degree in 1972 from the Catholic University of America, where he was a member of the Law Review during his final year there.

A partner in the Arlington firm of Dolan, Treanor, Murray & Walsh, Dolan served as an adjunct professor for the medical malpractice course at the Georgetown University School of Medicine in 1982.

Dolan and his wife, Josephine (Jef), have two children, Kathleen and Thomas.

Meal taxes

Revenue up

The city has recieved $740,000 in restaurant meal taxes, $149,000 more than expected, although a decrease had been anticipated because of the reduction in the tax by one cent last year. Through April, 92.6 percent of the total anticipated -- $8,354,427 -- had been collected compared to 81.9 percent in 1983 and 82.3 in 1982.

Local revenues have been coming in at a faster rate than the two previous years, according to an interim financial statement presented by Giles Dodd, assistant to the city manager in charge of finance, for the period from July 1, 1983 through April 30, 1984.

The city had received, by April 30, 73 percent of the total anticipated revenue of $198,356,972 compared to 67.7 percent of $185.364,309 in 1983 and 69 percent of $15,655,994 in 1982.

City recognized

The City of Virginia Beach has received a special mention from Technology Inc. for projects of the Public Utilities and Public Works Departments involving volunteer citizen coordinators.

City Manager Thomas H. Muehlenbeck told Council at an informal session recently that the award, presented at a recent meeting of Technology Inc. in Washington, D.C., is a unique recognition.

Against growth

Mrs. Henley goes to City Council

By Ronnie Greene
Staff Writer

In 1977, Barbara Henley decided she had had enough. A life-long native of the Pungo section of Virginia Beach, Henley was fed up with the overdevelopment she was seeing in the city, and decided to voice her opinion as a citizen to city council. Now, seven years later, Henley is in her sixth year as councilwoman and is finishing up her first term as vice-mayor of Virginia Beach.

Henley, you see, is not your typical politician. She is soft-soken and farms for a living. And some of her views are a stark contrast to most politicians, like the disgust she has with overpopulation in Virginia Beach. While most councilpeople at the Beach, like J. Henry McCoy, Kempsville Borough, Mayor Louis Jones, Bayside Borough and newly-elected Robert Fentress, Beach Borough, are strict proponents of growth for the city, Henley has done everything in her power to stop it.

Vice-Mayor Barbara Henley

"I became involved with politics when I went down to fight rezoning," Henley said. "Then, I started following council's actions."

Following those actions led to her decision to become a politician, one who has done well enough to merit praise from her peers. To friends and neighbors of the soft-spoken Henley, though she's still the same woman who has owned a farm with her husband for over two decades.

"I see overpopulation as threatening the whole nature of the area," Henley said. "When we

Not over yet

According to some political observers, the race for the Presidency is all over except for the minor detail of millions of Americans going to the polls and voting in November. Mr. Reagan is seen as a sure bet to renew his lease at the White House.

To paraphrase the old song, it's a long, long way from June to November, and it's probably inappropriate to pick a winner until the days dwindle down to a precious few. If the history of this country teaches us anything, it is that anything can happen, and usually does.

It is hard to fault the conventional wisdom that stands behind the early call in this campaign for Mr. Reagan. Inflation is down. Statistically, unemployment is down. There have been recoveries in both the housing and domestic car industries. Life is good again for large segments of the population.

Yet the Reagan Administration has financed this recovery by borrowing staggering amounts of money which keeps the interest rates high. Traditionally, they drop with inflation. That fly in the ointment might snuff out the present recovery.

Walter Mondale's weakness might turn out in November to be his strength. He has been portrayed as a fellow who can't say no to a special interst group. The special interest group is the newest animal in our political forest. They are groups formed to promote one thing whether it be an industry, a union, or a political cause. While it is now used as a weapon against Mondale, it is possible he will turn around in November and say to them: I took the heat for you: now you've got to get the votes out for me. In many ways, this election could decide the fate of special interests groups :if they can't deliver votes, they will be ignored.

The clearest indication that Mr. Reagan is taking the challenge of the Democrats seriously is simply that he is making a very special effort now to appear in the news. Of course, Mr. Reagan could be forgiven for having a nightmare about the coming election. The nightmare would be that Walter Mondale would open his mouth, and out of it comes Harry Truman's voice.

A welcome to the bar

This weekend several hundred members of the Virginia State Bar will be visiting Virginia Beach for their annual meeting.

These men and women are responsible for our system of law, the making and the enforcing of it, as well as the constant interpretation of what has been written before our times.

It has been said that the law is a living and changing instrument and that our laws are made by and for the people. We pay honor to these members of the bar who represent us in the understanding of that law and in the protection of our rights and liberties.

Flag Day June 14

Editor, Virginia Beach Sun:

The Civitan Club of Virginia Beach wholeheartedly endorses the annual national observance of Flag Day, June 14, and will support and promote a nationwide "Pause For The Pledge of Allegiance" by all Americans scheduled for 7 p.m.

Joint Resolutions have been introduced in both Houses of Congress to make the Pause For The Pledge a regular part of Flag Day, and President Reagan is considering an invitation to lead the American people in the simultaneous Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag.

Trible campaign funds

Editor, Virginia Beach Sun:

About two weeks ago it was reported that Senator Paul S. Trible, Jr. (R.-Va.), violated the Federal Election Law. For nine months, Trible's staff failed to report the source and terms of a $75,000.00 loan made to his 1982 Senate campaign by a Newport News bank. The Federal Election Commission decided, by a four to two vote, that Trible's failure to report the details of the loan on time was a violation of the federal election laws. The F.E.C. decided to take no action against Trible.

There are two noteworthy aspects of this situation. The first involves the nature of the loan itself. As the wire services reported, it is illegal under federal election

ArtCamp continued

Something new this year at ArtCamp is the addition of photography for children. Nancy Marx, who has conducted several independent study classes in photography for Old Donation School for the Gifted and Talented, will be teaching youngsters the basics of black-and-white photography. She believes children are more easily taught than adults because they have "no pre-conceived notion about photography." The fascination and magic of the darkroom aids in teaching youngsters the basics of 35mm photography, the concept of light and shadows in creating photograms, and how to make and use a pinhole camera. Nancy, the mother of four, feels that children who learn good darkroom procedures while young will have a much better background for photography as they grow older.

Supplies make safe sailors

Last week we talked about a first aid kit for your boat. You should also have a boat aid kit. Basic tools and spare parts should be carried at all times to help you get yourself out of trouble. Shear pins for outboards, extra spark plugs and points, or diesel injector for your engine, emergency gasket material, nuts, bolts, and cotter pins are just examples of things that should be on board. Your boat aid kit should also have the necessary tools to make minor repairs or the spare parts won't help you much. As with the medical kit, your spare parts should be assembled according to the kind of boating you do. The longer the trip, the more chance there is that something may break or fail and the more items you will need if you are going to make repairs. Strangely, it seems that more often than not it is some

Tourism

By John Warner
U.S. Senator

In its highest form, tourism is a quest for knowledge. Through tourism, we acquire a deeper awareness of our heritage, our environment and our culture. Travel stretches our minds and develops our sense of civilization.

Not all people of the world enjoy the same unrestricted travel Americans do. In many countries, citizens must obtain permission from the central government to leave the country, and their passports are impounded by the national police upon their return.

This quest for knowledge and freedom to travel have made tourism important not only to our leisure, but to our work. Roughly seven percent of the American labor force is employed by the tourism industry, either directly or indirectly. That's more people than are employed in mining, construction, agriculture, utilities, finance, insurance or real estate.

Travel is now the second largest retail industry and second largest private employer in the United States. In 1983, the industry generated nearly $200 billion in receipts and $20 billion in federal, state and local tax revenues. The industry directly employs 4.5 million Americans at every level or skill and indirectly provides another 2.2 million supporting jobs. Additionally, 99 percent of the one-half million businesses serving the traveler are classified by the government as small businesses.

In terms of international trade, international visitors to the United States in 1982 spent over $11 billion, generated $640 million in federal tax revenue and supported 300,000 American jobs.

Very simply, travel means jobs. Minority workers hold 13 percent of all jobs in the industry--a higher percentage than their share of total U.S. employment. Similarly, women hold over half of all travel industry jobs (54 percent), proportionately one quarter higher than their overall share. In my view, there can be little debate that this represents a more tangible, and more effective commitment to economic equity than all the existing job training and public assistance programs combined.

The industry also employs more of our nation's youth than any other. While only seven percent of total U.S. employment is represented by youth, it's estimated that 24 percent of food service workers are teenagers as well as 75 percent of amusement park workers.

Unfortunately, detailed data is not available on the number of young workers from whom a college education (and ultimately a higher standard of living and better life) was more possible because of travel industry employment. This data might indicate that travel and tourism are the largest private student assistance program in the nation. Clearly, the travel industry is doing more than its share in providing not only income but training and experience for our young citizens.

Part of the reasons this is possible is tourism's ability to create new jobs faster than the rest of the

First One Associates announces new building

Robert H. DeFord, a partner in First One Associates, recently announced that the Southern Professional Center I, the first office building in a planned two building complex to be located at 2712 Southern Boulevard in Virginia Beach, is slated for completion in July 1984.

Forty-five percent of the 9,000 square foot facility has been leased to Krummell & Jackson Associates, P.C., a Virginia Beach based architectural firm.

Southern Professional Center I was designed by Krummell & Jackson Associates, P.C., and is being developed and built by First One Associates. First One Associates will also own the building.

Partners for the organization are Robert H. DeFord, J. Brock Nelson, Charles R. Krummell, and H. Aubrey Jackson.

Equipment office

Contel installs new computor in Sandbridge

Continental Telephone is installing a new computer controlled equipment office in Sandbridge on the corner of Sandpiper Road and Rock Lane, said Mike Hall, superintendent - telephone services.

Hall said the new office serving Sandbridge is scheduled to go into service mid-to-late-August.

"An equipment office is a center where calls are processed and sent to their destinations," Hall explained. "The Sandbridge office is called a remote because it works like a satellite off of the computer in the Pungo office."

"Continental designed the office to look as much like a summer cottage as possible to fit into the style of houses in the neighborhood," Hall said. The building, 17 feet wide by 12 feet deep by 15 feet high, is built up on stilts to protect it from high waters. The exterior is brown wood siding.

Total cost of the office is $388,000, according to Hall.

"With the new computer controlled office, we will be able to keep up with growth faster and more economically," Hall said.

"With the new computer controlled office, we will be able to keep up with growth faster and more economically," Hall said. "Instead of installing large expensive copper cables, we will be able to add new pieces of equipment that plug into the existing equipment. We will also be able to add new services more quickly as they become available."

The new office will allow Continental to offer special custom calling features: call waiting, call forwarding, three-way calling, and speed calling.

"Our 426 exchange customers will be able to have the custom calling features without changing their phone numbers," Hall said.

In conjunction with the new office, the phone company is installing 68,000 feet of new cable at a cost of $139,000.

Continental Telephone, the second largest phone company operating in Virginia, provides service to 3,000 customers in the Pungo exchange and a total of 11,000 customers in the exchanges of Shipps Corner, Pungo, Princess Anne, and Knotts Island.

Tribute to Dad

I know a man who grew up as a farm boy in Texas. His family was rich in character, pride and love but had little in material wealth. He met and married a beautiful Texas girl and their son was born at the height of the great depression. Times were hard but he did not say, "What am I going to do? I don't have a job." He went to the city and got a job - selling refrigerators door to door. Not any easy task during the depression, but he managed to do it well and make it pay. The salesmen were the people who really brought us out of the depression.

He became a successful businessman for his family very well. He paused in his career to join General Patton's third army in Europe. He was on Omaha Beach on the 6th of June, 1944 and he was in Germany on V.E. Day. He and his wife of 50 years have raised their son with discipline blended with much love. They provided him with a good education and had the courage to set him free and let him fly. But he was always there to lend strength and encouragement to his son whenever it was needed.

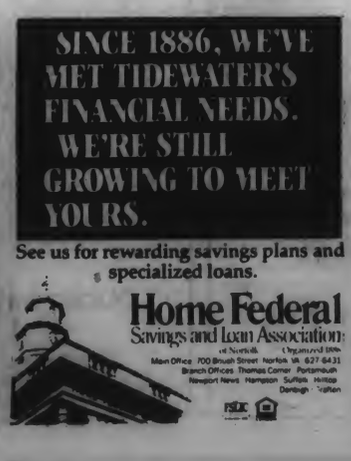

He never lost his sense of humor -even when events seemed very grim. He taught his son everything he knows - yet he is still wiser. I am that son and I am grateful for all the teachings, for the good humor, even during very humorless times, and for the strength and wisdon that I still draw upon.

laws for a bank to loan a political candidate money unless it would have made the same loan to another customer in a similar financial situation. Trible was not required to provide any collateral for the $75,000.00 loan. Now, it is true that banks sometimes give loans without requiring collateral. It is possible that someone else with Trible's assets would also have been granted a loan on the same terms. At the very least, though, the transaction is questionable - and made more so by the fact that six of the 13 members of the bank's Regional Advisory Board of Directors also contributed to Trible's 1982 campaign.

The second aspect of this situation involves not a questionable practice - but an illegal one. Failure to report the source and terms of a questionable loan is even more problematic.

Although the Federal Election Law was clearly broken, it is of course, possible that everyone's intentions were good and the violation was inadvertent. It is possible that the loan was legal and above-board, and that the failure to report it was unintentional. At the very least, however, Senator Trible and his staff have allowed for an appearance of impropriety. They also have evidenced an apparent disregard and a lack of respect for Federal Election Laws.

Unfortunately, Senator Trible is not the first candidate or other government official to fail to abide strictly by disclosure laws. Disclosure laws enable voters to identify possible conflicts of interest. They enable us to determine whether our officials are representing us - or special interests. Disclosure laws enable us to vote intelligently. We must insist that these laws by respected and obeyed by those people we allow to represent and govern us.

Lynnhaven Colony flea market

The Lynnhaven Colony Congregational Church will hold their eighth annual flea market on Saturday, June 16, commencing at 9 a.m. on the church grounds located at 2217 N. Great Neck Road in Virginia Beach (one block south of Shore Drive).

This event features a bake sale, arts and crafts, plants and refreshments, as well as offering a wide variety of the usual flea market items such as toys/games, clothing, furniture, collectables, etc., and is sponosred by the Women's Fellowship.

If additional information is desired, Beach people may contact the Church office at 481-7674.

Flag ceremony

National Nursing Home Week was celebrated country-wide last month. To honor the occasion, Lynn Shores Manor held a flag dedication ceremony.

Adam Thoroughgood Chapter DAR presented an american flag to Lynn Shores Manor in a ceremony led by the Regent of Adam Thoroughgood, Mrs. Hilary O. Brashear. She was assisted by Mrs. Welliver Edwards, Mrs. W. H. Austin, Jr., Mrs. Thomas A. Moore, Mrs. Milton W. Thorpe, and Mrs. E. M. Stein. Miss Karen Scarborough, activities director-coordinator of Lynn Shores Manor was in charge of the program. Mrs. Barr, administrator, gave an acceptance speech on behalf of the residents. Music was performed by the Great Bridge Stage Band under the direction of Mr. Kirby.

Preceeding the presentation, 242 balloons were released to which were attached the individual names of the residents. Across the nation, similiar Beverly nursing Home facilities released over 70,000 balloons at the same moment. Anyone finding one of the balloons was asked to write a note to the person whose name was mentioned.

adult or older child. They will get a rainbow folder to keep a record of their books. For every five books they listen to, they can collect a sticker for the rainbow. There will be special programs and other incentives throughout the summer.

The traditional Summer Reading Program for independent readers will feature a passport folder with a game inside. Other games and puzzle will be available each week at the library. Members will collect a sticker for their passport games after each three books read. Six books earns a reader's certificate but there is no limit to how many books the child can read. Many special programs will be presented all summer.

One of the first of these programs will be our well-known area storyteller Norris Spencer. She will present a program of stories at each Area Library on the following schedule: Great Neck Library, Wednesday, June 13, at 3 p.m.; Kempsville Library, Tuesday, June 19, at 2:30 p.m.; Oceanfront Library, Wednesday, June 20, at 3:30 p.m.; Windsor Woods Library, Wednesday, June 20, at 7 p.m.; Bayside Library, Thursday, June 21, at 3 p.m.

Other programs will include the Virginia Beach Maritime Historical Museum, the Wappadoodle Puppets, and the movie Pippi in the South Seas. Watch for announcements of these and other programs and activities.

There are several ways in which adults can help children practice their reading skills during the summer and, at the same time, increase their pleasure in reading. First, remember that this is a vacation activity and participation should not be competitive or forced. Every book read is a gain for a child and there is no magic number of books that makes a better reader.

Children value the things their family enjoy, so let them see you enjoying reading and visiting the library. Encourage them to talk about their books. Respect what they say - if they think a book is boring or seem to miss the point, they may not be ready for that book yet. Sometimes the message of a book like Charlotte's Web will lie dormant in a child until he or she needs it to cope with life.

Read aloud to children even after they have learned to read for themselves. Reading aloud can be a wonderful way for a family to share in a quiet activity. The library has several books that can help you choose books to read aloud. They also point out its many values in developing a child's reading and writing skills. Also many books too difficult for a child's reading skills are nevertheless within his or her present interests.

The Public Broadcasting System has a summer children's program called Reading Rainbow. Your child may enjoy checking out some of the books the program suggests. Even if he or she saw it last year there will be new episodes this summer.

The libraries hope that this summer's program will be a valuable and fun experience for many children. Last year over 2000 children participated. We hope for even more this year.

cess Anne Road should be developed for growth and that the infrastructure must be built.

Rae LeSesne, president of the Ridgely Civic League, said that he warned the city last year that it would become an example of poor planning, and it has, he said. He said the battle cry of citizens in Chesapeake is that, "We don't want another Kempsville." He said that maybe the green line should be called the red line, for stop, or for getting the city deeper into the red if it were moved.

Scott said that the city faces the eventuality of moving the line some day. If an area is used as a low density buffer area, the residents, there become resistent to higher densities which may be proposed later. Therefore buffer zones become a problem five or ten years later.

Scott listed as options:

•Setting up timing for moving the line later.

•Moving the line when certain conditions (services) exist.

In answer to questions from Mayor Jones, Scott said that 75 percent of the property presently being developed is on land that was recently rezoned for higher density but in keeping, for the most part, with the plan.

To maintain the current rates of growth, on which the projections are predicated, Mayor Jones asked whether land would have to be rezoned.

Scott said that a great deal of land even north of the line is still zoned agriculture.

At this point, Mayor Jones said, the question is whether or not it is more valuable to spend more for roads and have more open space (in developed areas) or hold the line and have less open space.

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC OF PROPOSED RATE INCREASE BY CONTINENTAL TELEPHONE COMPANY OF VIRGINIA

On April 6, 1984, Continental Telephone Company of Virginia ("Continental") filed with the Virginia State Corporation Commission an application to increase its rates and charges for Virginia local telephone service by approximately $19.6 million and to increase its intrastate carrier access charges by approximately $4.3 million to be effective May 6, 1984. Continental's figures indicate that the application, if approved, would result in increases in basic monthly rates for residential customers ranging from $2.50 to $7.80 per month and for business customers increases ranging from $4.40 to $57.65 per month. Persons interested in the proposed allocation of the increase among customer classes should review Continental's application and the accompanying materials filed with the application.

Continental's filing was completed May 8, 1984. Continental's proposed tariffs have been suspended to and through October 5, 1984, or until further order of the Commission.

The Virginia State Corporation Commission has scheduled a public hearing on Continental's application in its 13th Floor Courtroom, Jefferson Building, Bank and Governor Streets, Richmond, Virginia commencing at 10:00 a.m., September 5, 1984, for the purpose of receiving statements from public witnesses and considering evidence submitted by the parties. Copies of the application, together with Continental's supporting data, are available for public inspection during normal business hours at Continental offices where bills may be paid and in the Commission's Document Control Center, located on Floor B-1 of the Jefferson Building, Richmond, Virginia and open Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

On or before July 10, 1984, any person who expects to submit evidence and to cross-examine Continental and Commission witnesses must file with the Commission an original and fifteen (15) copies of a Notice of Protest conforming to Rule 5:16(a) of the Commission's Rules of Practice and Procedure. A copy of this notice must be mailed to Continental's counsel, John W. Riely, Esquire, Hunton and Williams, P. O. Box 1535, Richmond, Virginia 23212.

On or before August 13, 1984, all persons who have filed a Notice of Protest and who expect to participate in the hearing as a Protestant must file with the Commission a Protest, together with an original and fifteen (15) copies of all prepared testimony and exhibits of the witnesses to be offered at the hearing. Protestants must serve a copy of the protest and testimony upon all other parties.

On or before August 21, 1984, the Commission's Staff shall file with the Clerk of the Commission fifteen (15) copies of the prepared testimony and exhibits of each witness expected to present direct testimony and will serve a copy upon Continental and all parties.

Any interested person, not otherwise participating as a Protestant, who desires to make a statement at the public hearing in his own behalf on the application, need only be present in the Commission's Courtroom 15 minutes prior to the commencement of the hearing and inform the Commission's Bailiff that he wishes to speak. All persons desiring to speak will be heard as expeditiously as possible beginning at 10:00 a.m. or shortly thereafter. In lieu of attending the public hearing, public witnesses may choose to send their comments to the Commission in written form. Such comments must be received no later than August 30, 1984.

All written comments to the Commission concerning Continental's application should refer to Case Nol. PUC840009 and should be addressed to William C. Young, Clerk, Document Control Center, P. O. Box 2118, Richmond, Virginia 23216.

economy, even during recession periods. The travel industry added 39,000 new jobs in the recessionary year 1982, while overall U.S. employment declined by 1.6 million jobs. Despite five recessions since 1958, the industry has produced successively more jobs in each of those intervening 25 years, contributing nearly 11 percent of the 38 million new jobs created.

According to the U.S. Department of Labor, payroll jobs in travel-related businesses have increased 183 percent since 1958, or more than twice as fast as the growth in total U.S. payroll employment during the same period. As recently as 1979, the travel and tourism industry was responsible for creating 35 percent of all new jobs. In 1980, it provided 28 percent of the new employment generated that year.

In Virginia, travel and tourism is the third largest employer in the state, providing jobs for more than 83,000 persons at an annual payroll of over $679 million.

As the second largest industry in the Commonwealth, travel and tourism generated over $3.5 billion in expenditures in 1981, resulting in total tax revenues to local, state and federal governments of over $307.4 million. In 1981, persons traveling in Virginia, for business and pleasure, spent an average $9.8 million a day for food, lodging, services and transportation.

This year, at least two-thirds of the American public is expected to travel to a destination 100 miles or more from home. Last year, Americans took one billion such trips, more than twice as many as were reported in the 1972 National Travel Survey.

Tourism is a vital part of American life. It is our perfect freedom.

"Be a clown...be a clown...be a clown" could very well be the theme song for Judy Vermillion, who will be teaching children the art of clowning. Judy views clowning as "a different tool of expressionism, a way of expressing one's creativity." Children will use paint to transform faces, mime to "speak" without words, and costumes to decorate the human form. On the last day, youngsters will try out their new skills at the Virginia Beach Boardwalk Art Show as "Art Patrons" passing out clown awards.

What could be more appealing to a child than animals and the great outdoors? Suzanne Stevens, an exhibitor, award winner, and studio instructor with the Virginia Beach Arts Center for five years, will utilize both in her summer classes. Beginning with basic shapes, students will work with a variety of drawing and painting materials to depict their favorite animals. Other classes will teach students a mixed media approach to creating landscape and seascape paintings, and how to achieve various effects of water, land and sky. These classes will culminate with a field trip to Fort Story for an outdoor sketching session.

Most children enjoy "decorating" their rooms with posters. For them, Lou Lowenthal's class on "Screen Stars" is ideal. Lou, an art instructor at the Old Donation Center for the Gifted and Talented will introduce children to the art of silkscreening. They will learn the grid process for making a photographic image into a drawing, which becomes the basis for their own silkscreen poster series. Children will also learn the basics of silkscreen printing, as well as principles of poster desgin.

Monica Serra, a New York painter and vocalist of "The Lost Tropics," has extensive experience teaching art on all levels, from kindergarten through college, and has had frequent exhibitions in the area. She will conduct several classes geared to teaching self exploration through drawing and the basic concepts of color, and negative and positive space through creative design projects. Children will collaborate on major art projects as well as daily projects exploring the adventures of design through various two-dimensional materials.

Coaching—Ray Shackelford, O. T. coach gives Jennifer Mohap (l) and Megan Kitts (sitting on bar) some pointers as state champ Becky Mohap looks on.

Ocean Tumblers gymnastics girls take state titles

By Jackie Matthews

Each spring the United States Gymnastic Federation holds a state gymnastic competition for all Virginia Gymnasts. In order to participate each gymnast must score a certain number of points, depending on their class rating at one of the three sectional meets held throughout Virginia.

Recently the 1984 USGF State Meet was held in Stafford, Virginia. Ocean Tumblers returned with the team class III and class IV girls' state championship titles. Each girl received a trophy. Megan Kitts, class IV and Jennifer Mohap, class III, took first place for all around gymnast, each receiving a gold medal.

The boys' team placed second in the USGF Virginia State Meet and second in the South Atlantic Boys International League Championship. The SABI was an open division including Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania. First place winners were the International Gymnastic Center from Pennsylvania.

Most of the O.T. gymnasts are residents of Virginia Beach and Chesapeake. There were 42 team members attending the state competition, of which 19 members hold individual 1984 state championship awards.

Ray Shackelford, director and head coach of O. T., is very dedicated to all his boys and girls. "I want to take the pressure off. When they are discouraged I try to get them to focus on the enjoyment of gymnastics, not winning ribbons or medals and eventually they will do better and start excelling."

Most team members are at the gym in excess of twelve hours a week. Much individual time is spent with the coaches. Kali Vogal is beam coach, Susan Tibbitt, floor coach, Bernie Vahenie bars, vault and head coach for the boys team. Shackelford is always nearby watching and directing, giving that extra encouragement needed to perform.

"I like to think we help mold their personalities into young adults," Shackelford said.

Shackelford has lived in Virginia Beach for eight years and been with O.T. for ten years. He has been a gymnast since high school, taking a state championship in 1968 for parallel bars and trampoline and placing third as all around gymnast. He received a scholarship in gymnastics to O.D.U. After college he taught at Woodstock Elementary, also coaching the boys gymnastic team at Bayside High School. In 1974 he joined The Conservatory of Arts Ocean Tumblers, now known as Ocean Tumblers.

"We have come along way since 1980 when we ranked 20th at the USGF State meet in class IV. We have now held the state championship for the last three years. In 1983 we entered our class III team for the first time and took second place. This year we moved up to take first place in that position also," Shackleford said proudly.

Ocean Tumblers compete through class I. Six O. T. gymnmasts have made collegiate teams.

Becky Mohap, class I, has just received a gymnastic scholarship to North Carolina State University to work under head coach Mark Stevenson.

This past year a former class II O. T. gymnast and student at James Madison University, Leslie Karnitschni won the state colligiate uneven parallel bars title.

The team is very excited about all their honors. They are eagerly awaiting the compulsory and optional teams competition soon to be held at the Olympiad in Richmond.

Hidden Sugars difficult to find''

Battle against sugar

Parents may need to become detectives in finding the hidden sugars to prevent their children from eating too much sugar.

The health hazards of consuming too much sugar include dental caries, excess calories which can lead to obesity, and poor nutrition when sweets crowd out other food containing essential nutrients.

It isn't easy to reduce the amount of sugar in children's diets, said Cosby Steele Rogers, assistant professor of child development at Virginia Tech. To win the battle against sugar, children need to avoid hidden sugars, find alternate sources of "sweetness," and turn to non-food ways to celebrate special occasions.

"The hidden sugars are difficult to find," said Mrs. Rogers. Other forms of sugars include fructose, dextrose, lactose and maltose.

When reading the labels on food be aware of words ending in 'ose' which indicate some form of sugar. Other words that indicate the presence of sugar are tubinado sugar, corn syrup, molassas, honey and maple syrup. The first ingredient listed on the label is present in the greatest quantity by weight.

Sugars are found in catsup, peanut butter, luncheon meats, hot dogs, pork and beans, non-dairy creamer, fruit-flavored yogurt and canned vegetables.

In planning menus, families can lower the sugar that is consumed. Snacks and desserts that consist of unsweetened foods can be served. Examples include popcorn, cheese, and vegetables with dip.

Sugar intake can be reduced by relying on the natural sugars contained in fruit or other foods. These are still sugars, but the use of fruit provides some nutrients along with the sweetness. Fructose can also be purchased in granulated form in the diet section of most grocery stores. It is more expensive than sucrose, but a smaller quantity is needed.

Fresh fruits should have priority in menu planning, she said. However when canned fruits must be used, look for fruits canned in their own juices or of other fruits.

In addition, treats and rewards can be completely carlorie-free by making them non-edible. Young children enjoy small favors such as balloons, finger puppets, combs, small wind-up toys, soaps in special shapes, small figures of favorite cartoon characters, erasers, peel-off stickers and books.

It is possible to reduce the amount of sugar children consume and have a nutritious healthy diet and include special treats, said Mrs. Rogers. The result should be healthier children, with fewer dental caries and when they are adults, it will be easier for them to avoid obesity with its health risks.

fifty-cent pin or gadget that gives way and causes thousands of dollars damage to an expensive boat. So have a good collection of little things to save yourself from damage to the big things.

The next recommendation is for a compass and basic navigation equipment. The "I'll recognize that rock" method of navigation is all right as long as visibility is good. If fog, rain, or nightfall catches you out on the water, you may not "recognize that rock" until it is too late. If you use your compass and charts as a usual practice, you will know where you are at all times and you can proceed through poor visibility with safety. Being able to navigate in reduced visibility may often mean the difference between getting home on time or sitting for hours "out there somewhere" because your landmarks have disappeared.

For any boat that operates out of sight of land or of other boats, a marine radio telephone is a great piece of insurance. If you get into trouble when nobody else is around it is imperative that you let someone know you have a problem and need help. Many boaters put their faith in CB radios, but that supposes that, (1) some body is listening, (2) that you are within its limited range and (3) you're not being blown off the air by someone with a flat tire on the interstate. Marine radio frequencies are routinely monitored by the Coast Guard, other marine agencies, and other radio-equipped vessels when underway. This is not generally true of CB. Marine radio-telephones give you a direct line to a rescue agency while CB gives you a "maybe." If you are in trouble and need help, you need it now! It is not time to rely on a voluntary communications system that "may work.

Boats used for overnight or weekend trips should have emergency food, water and blankets aboard in case the trip is prolonged by an emergency. Such extra rations will ease the decision to ride out a storm in a safe but isolated harbor rather than risk a dangerous return to port. So many things can happen to prevent your return at the time you planned, it is only common sense to be prepared to stay longer if the need arises. Emergency rations should be packed to withstand the marine environment for long periods of time without deteriorating. Water containers must be sealable and chemically inert so they don't allow the water to become contaminated. Food containers must be either corrosion proof or checked at regular intervals to be sure the content remains undamaged and edible. Select the type of food that can, if necessary, be eaten directly from the container without having to be cooked, mixed or added to. There is probably nothing more frustrating than to have to go hungry for lack of a fire. Last but not least, be sure that the emergency rations have all the necessary openers packed with them. Obviously, emergency rations are useless if you can't open them. If you elect to stay out longer than you had planned, radio to phone so your whereabouts will be known and an unnecessary search will not be initiated.

the office of chief justice of the Supreme Court of Virginia in 1981, becoming the state's 23rd chief justice. Carrico succeeded Lawrence W. I'Anson, who retired after more than 23 years on the court, the last six of which he served as chief justice.

A native of Faquier County, Carrico attended public schools in Fairfax County and was graduated from George Washington University Law School in 1942. A year later he was appointed a trial justice of Fairfax County at the age of 26. In addition, he served as a naval officer during World War II.

In 1951, Carrico resigned his judgeship to go into the private practice of law, and five years later he returned to the bench as associate judge of the 16th Judicial Circuit. His ascension to the highest judicial post in Virginia came almost precisely 20 years after he was appointed to the Supreme Court of Virginia by Governor J. Lindsay Almond, Jr. on Jan. 30, 1961.

Ms. Dolan, 37, has served as editor of the Los Angeles Herald Examiner since December 1981, when she was promoted following a stint of two and a half years as managing editor of the newspaper. Ms. Dolan went to work for the Herald Examiner after working at the now-defunct Washington Star from 1969-77.

She was raised in Arlington and is the younger sister of Virginia State Bar President-elect William D. Dolan, III of Arlington, who will ascend to the presidency of the State Bar following the luncheon remarks of Chief Justice Carrico and his sister.

Mary Anne Dolan is a member of the editorial board of the American Society of Newspaper Editors and a member of the National Organization for Women and the National Women's Political Caucus. She was a member in 1981 and 1982 of the Pulitzer Prize journalism jury, and has been a member of the Board of Selectors for the Neiman Fellows of Harvard University.

The four-day Annual Meeting gets underway on Thursday, June 14, with an all-day Continuing Legal Education program on "Recent Developments in the Law" from 9:30 a.m. - 5 p.m. at the Cavalier Hotel Beach Club. The State Bar's governing Council will conduct its business meeting at 9 a.m. on June 14 in the Ballroom of the restored Cavalier Hotel, across the street from the Cavalier Oceanfront Hotel.

The panel program on partnership will feature D. Robert White, an associate at the Washington, DC firm of Hogan & Hartson, and the author of the best-selling paperback The Official Lawyers Handbook. This popular book takes a satirical look at the lifestyle and practices of lawyers in much the same way that The Official Preppies Handbook examined the lifestyle of "preppies."

Other featured panelists will be Candace S. Kovacic, an associate professor at American University's Washington College of Law and the author of "Applying Restitution to Remedy a Discriminatory Denial of Partnership"; Barbara A. Brown, a partner with the Washington, DC firm of Paul, Hastings, Janofsky & Walker; and W. Taylor Reveley, III, a managing partner with the Richmond firm of Hunton & Williams.

Moderating this program will be Anne Marie Whittemore, a partner and the chairman of the recruiting committee with the Richmond firm of McGuire, Woods and Battle.

The annual election of officers of the 17,800-member Virginia State Bar will be conducted at 11:45 a.m. on Saturday, June 16, in the Coral Reef Room of the Cavalier Oceanfront Hotel.

Outstanding! Linda Scotece receives the Liberal Arts Management Program Outstanding Senior Award from Robert Cass, associate professor of management/Business/Economics, at Virginia Wesleyan College's recent Honors Convocation. Scotece is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Y. Scotece of Virginia Beach and a graduate of Kempsville High School.

Medication for seniors discussed

Mary Crozier of the Virginia Beach Comprehensive Substance Abuse Program will give a lecutre and film presentation concerning medications for senior citizens on Thursday, June 14, at 7 p.m. in the Bayside Area Library. Registration in advance is required for this presentation. Please call the library at 464-9280 to register and obtain further information.

Appalachian Trail Club to meet

Tidewater Appalachian Trail Club will meet Wednesday, June 20, at 7:30 p.m. at the Church of the Advent, 9620 Norfolk Avenue in Ocean View. Reese Lukei will present a talk and slide show program on banding birds in the Tidewater area with emphasis on the Peregrine Falcon, an endangered species. The public may attend. For information call 467-6578, 340-5948 or 596-5136.

Certificates awarded

50 years at the bar

Fifty years of membership in the Virginia bar will soon be celebrated by 45 lawyers, who will be honored for their long tenure at a special ceremony during the upcoming 46th Annual Meeting of the Virginia State Bar in Virginia Beach.

These 45 lawyers will each receive a 50-year Certificate of Appreciation at 11:45 a.m. on Saturday, June 16, in the Coral Reef Room at the Cavalier Oceanfront Hotel.

To be eligible for the half-a-century honor, a lawyer must have been a member in good standing of the Virginia bar for 50 consecutive years.

Recipients of the golden anniversary certificate will be:

who will become chairman of the VSB's International Law Section for the 1984-85 bar year.

Moderating this portion of the program will be James H. Laughlin, Jr., an Arlington lawyer and a past chairman of the VSB's Patent, Trademark and Copyright Law Section.

This program, and all other section programs, are open to all interested persons.

Another timely program, sponsored by the VSB's Criminal Law Section, will focus on "The Criminal Lawyer and the Media.' To be conducted at 10 a.m. on June 15 (Coral Room E, Cavalier Ocean Front Hotel), the Program will feature a newspaper reporter, a defense lawyer and a lawyer with newspaper clients, each discussing the topic from his perspective. Featured will be Robert G. Cabell, Jr., a member of the Richmond firm of Cabell, Paris, Lowenstein and Bareford; Rob Walker, a reporter for the Richmond Times-Dispatch who covers the federal courts, the Virginia Supreme Court and a variety of law-related subjects; and Alexander Wellford, a member of the Richmond firm of Christian, Barton, Epps, Brent & Chappell who represents Richmond Newspapers.

The Virginia State Bar is the administrative arm of the Supreme Court of Virginia responsible for regulating the practice of law in the state. Its 17,800 members include all lawyers and judges in Virginia.

More than 650 State Bar members will be in attendance at the Annual Meeting, to be conducted for the seventh straight year in Virginia Beach.

Rezoning of Newlight section gets council nay

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

In voting against a rezoning in the Newlight section of Virginia Beach, City Council has indicated a reluctance to do anything in the target community until an overall plan is available.

Newlight is a low-income neighborhood where sewer and water was recently extended with Community Development funds.

Council by a vote of 8-2 Monday afternoon turned down an application for rezoning a residential parcel to office use.

Councilman Harold Heischober pointed out that Council had already made a commitment to do nothing in any of the 12 target areas until plans were available. He said that although the parcel could eventually be zoned O-1 he saw no way to deviate from this policy.

Mr. and Mrs. Carnell Smith, and Dixon and Van, Inc. applied for a change of zoning from R-8 Residential District to O-1 Office District on a 33,904-square-foot parcel at the southeast corner of the intersection of Ferry Point Road and Indian River Road in the Kempsville Borough. The parcel is within the Newlight target areas, one of 12 in the city qualify for Community Development Funds.

Plans have been drawn for two of the communities -- Burton Station and Reidtown. The plan for Burton Station, designed by an outside consultant, is being implemented, but the plan for Reidtown, prepared in house, has been withdrawn.

City Manager Thomas H. Muehlenbeck said that it would be better to have an outside firm design the community so that the staff could objectively review the plan.

In that case, said Councilman H. Jack Jennings Jr., who had suggested the Planning Department prepare a plan, an outside firm should prepare the Comprehensive Plan as well.

Voting against denial of the petition were Jennings and Councilman Robert G. Jones.

Another parcel adjoining the Smith tract was rezoned last February to office use. R. Jones said that he voted against that change but that now Council has a situation where it created the office use. He said it made more sense to square off the corner.

Residents who objected to the rezoning Monday, also objected to the previous rezoning. The difference between the two tracts is that the rezoned parcel has access only on Indian River Road while the Smith tract also has access on Ferry Point Road so that homes could be built on the land facing Ferry Point rather than Indian River.

Mayor Louis R. Jones said he voted for the office use on the other parcel because he didn't think he would want to live in a house facing heavily-traveled Indian River Road.

Thomas Jennings, representing the United Civic League, said that residents felt differently, that they saw the property as suitable for housing.

The number of objectors to the petition was swelled by the another group of Kempsville

73 retire from Beach school system

At its annual retirement banquet June 5, the Virginia Beach public school division recognized 73 retiring employees who have given nearly 1,200 years of service to the education of the children of the city.

The employees, most of whom retire at the end of the school year, include 30 teachers, two teacher aides, three guidance counselors, one visiting teacher, four administrators, five bus drivers, eight cafeteria workers, six maintenance workers, six custodians, seven clerical workers, and one nurse. The 73 have amassed 1,195-½ years of service in Virginia Beach Public Schools and a total of 1,424-½ years of service in education.

The banquet was held at Green Run High School, where the retiring employees received the traditional Golden Apple of the school division, plus a certificate for their years of service. Guest speaker was Dr. Roy A. Woods, chairman of the Virginia Beach School Board. The awards were made by Dr. E.E. Brickell, Division Superintendent. Entertainment

Boardwalk judges are distinctive and diverse

Three distinctive and diverse judges will award more than $10,500 in cash prizes during this year's Boardwalk Art Show. The judges are: Ree Schonlau, Founder and Director of the Ree Schonlau Gallery in Omaha, Nebraska; Frances Fralin, Assistant Curator at the Corcoran Gallery in Washington, D.C.; and Richard Merkin, a New York artist and educator.

Ree Schonlau, a former studio artist for more than 10 years is highly active in the field of crafts and works toward the expansion and innovation of craftsworks. She founded and directs the Craftsman's Guild for the American Craftsman in Omaha, Nebraska, and was recently honored by receiving the "Woman of the Arts Award" from the Political Women's Caucus.

Schonlau received a B.A. in Fine Arts from the University of Nebraska at Omaha. She has received hands-on experience in workshops throughout the country, and attended the Pilchuck School of Glass.

Schonlau has juried shows throughout the country in addition to teaching and lecturing. She has taught at the Joslyn Art Museum as well as Creighton University. Schonlau has been a board member for the Nebraska Arts Council, a member of the American Crafts Council, an advisory member of the United Arts of Omaha, and has written an exhibition catalog entitled "Convergent Territories."

Frances Fralin has been an assistant curator for the Corcoran Gallery since 1968, with a specialty in photography. Prior to 1968, she was with the Washington Museum of Modern Art. She is a graduate of Spartenburg Converse, South Carolina, and attended Averett College in Danville, Virginia. Fralin Also had participated in intensive study programs in photography at the Corcoran School of Art in Washington, D.C.

An early fascination with photography led Fralin to her current vocation, although she maintains an interest in and love of many art forms. An amateur photographer herself, she has always experimented in the medium, which she describes as a constant source of enjoyment for her.

New York artist and educator Richard Merkin has been exhibiting his pastel and oil paintings and serigraph prints since 1964. He has been Adjun-

Hearing scheduled for Friday

The Virginia Beach City Manager, Thomas H. Muehlenbeck, will hold an administrative public hearing on Friday, June 22, at 11:30 a.m., in the City Council Chambers, City Hall Building, Virginia Beach Municipal Center, to consider projects for inclusion in the Capital Improvement Program.

All persons wishing to speak concerning the Capital Improvement Program may do so and will have the opportunity to give written and oral comments on projects for consideration in the CIP.

For further information contact the Public Information Office, at 427-4111.

Beach funds TV show for seniors

The Virginia Beach Campus of Tidewater Community College has received a grant from the City of Virginia Beach to help produce a television program for senior citizens called "Tomorrow-Today."

The program is a cooperative effort of the Mayor's Committee on Aging, City of Virginia Beach, and Tidewater Community College. The program is produced in the Learning Resources Center of the Virginia Beach Campus. Dr. Jerry D. Holt, coordinator of the Learning Lab and Audio-Visual Services, is the executive producer. Bill Myers is the producer-director, and Mariette Irwin is the program host and writer.

The 30-minute bi-weekly programs are designed to entertain, inform and motivate senior citizens and the family members concerned with their welfare. Topics related to health, nutrition, exercise, safety, psychology of aging, housing, consumerism and others are explored. the programs encourage senior citizens to get involved in volunteer programs and to take charge of their own situations.

"Tomorrow-Today" is cablecast over Cox Cable Channell 11 and Cross Country Cable (Chesapeake) three times weekly.

$38.15 million bond sale approved

Virginia Beach City Council has authorized the sale of $38.15 million bonds.

Of the total, $10.18 million will be in water and sewer bonds from the $46 million bond issue approved by referendum in 1980. Of this issue, $14.5 million have already been sold.

The $27.97 million in public improvement bonds being offered for sale include $8.4 million in unsold bonds from the $22.9 million issue approved by referendum in 1980 and $19.57 million authorized by Council December 12, 1983 and as amended on February 13, 1984 without a referendum.

The water and sewer bonds will be used to continue the city' water and sewer program, and the public improvement bonds will be used for school projects, engineering and highway projects, dredging the Eastern Branch of the Lynnhaven River, building projects and parks and recreation projects.

Merit Scholars

Six Beach students recognized by Council

By Lee Cahill

Six Virginia Beach students, all National Merit Scholars were recognized in resolutions approved by City Council recently.

They include:

Douglas Garrou, First Colonial High School, valedictorian with a scholastic average of 4.05 and SAT score of 1470. He will be a Jefferson Scholar at the University of Virginia. He is captain of the Ledger-Star Scholastic Team and president of the National Honor Society and attended the Governor's School for the Gifted.

Watch on the Kremlin

The Soviet Union ought to seriously consider painting a red cross on the side of the Kremlin, and just go ahead and have it officially designated a hospital zone for once again their top leader is showing visible signs of failing health. Constantis Chernenko is suffering from emphysema, and it is widely speculated that it is a serious condition.

One immediate consequence which comes to mind is that it is very difficult to negotiate anything with the Soviet leadership while the behind the scenes players are wrestling to replace the man at the top. This was one of the contributing factors to the Cold War struggles of the Fifties as Joseph Stalin died of whatever God or his enemies concocted for him and it took several years before Nikita Khrushchev emerged.

As Stalin traced the legitimacy of his reign back to Lenin and the Revolution, the post Stalinists leadership points back to their experiences in the Great Patriotic War (as the Soviets call the Second World War). For better or for worse, their experiences in that war shaped their thinking towards the west. It also shaped their own society, where comfort took a backseat to defense. It also made them wary of a direct confrontation with the United States.

The serious questions that arise from the passing of the post World War Two generation of leadership from the Soviet Union is what kind of people are going to replace them and what will they want. Will the new emerging leadership be more ideological, more rigid? Will they be willing to directly con-

Art for the city

Of late there has been a groundswell of opinion to the effect that Art is good for the community. Artists of course have been telling the community that for ages, to little enthusiasm and scant attention. Now the business and professional communities are saying so as well.

Much has been made over the statement of Norfolk Southern Railroad Chairman Robert B. Claytor that a major factor in the relocation of his firm in Southeastern Virginia was the cultural climate of the area.

Our Mayor, Louis R. Jones, was recently commended by the National Clearinghouse on the Arts for the good work he and City Council have done in making the importance of the arts felt in Virginia Beach.

As Seattle, Washington's Mayor Charles Royer puts it, art "takes the hard edges off institutions, public or private and makes them more humane."

The value of the Virginia Beach Arts Center to our community is but one clear example of the importance of art to the Beach. This weekend is the VABAC's big chance to show off as the 29th Annual Boardwalk Art Show gets underway. Beach citizens and visitors alike should find something to enrich the mind, the eye and the soul. Hats off to the Virginia Beach Arts Center and its staff and the wonderful job they are doing in making Virginia Beach a better place to live.

Marriage

How a society feels about marriage reveals as much about the value system of the society as anything else. So it should not be startling that there is a great diversity of opinion about marriage in the United States. In some of this nation's more progressive states, marriage seems to be the binding of a man and a woman in a lease of wedded bliss which may or may not be renewed on a year to year basis. Month to month, perhaps.

In Virginia, while there is as great a diversity as you will find anywhere, there is a more traditional outlook. When a man and a woman here get married, by and large when they say until death do us part they mean it. Marriages last because two people come to love each other too much to break it up during those times when they would like to give up. The three magic ingredients of a successful marriage are love, realistic expectations, and a willingness to compromise. Take away any of them, and what is left is a formula for misery.

June is the month that most folks think of as the marriage month. Many young people will be taking that step this month. According to statistics, there has been a decrease in the number of divorces, but unfortunately a significant number of marriages will simply not work out. And there is a dark side to some of those marriages that do last as spouse and child abuse statistics relay. Yet marriage endures as the DNA of a society: it is the essential building block of every society on this globe.

So as the celebrations of marriages continue this June let us remember that while it may be maligned, and while various other social schemes have come and gone, marriage has a deep rooted place in humanity. From the Stone Age to the Nuclear Age, marriage has lasted as the way men and women commit themselves in mutual respect, honor, and love. And as they say in the storybooks, to all of you who are marrying and who are married, may you live happy everafter.

Computer jargon

Last month I talked about the essential hardware for a computer. The central processing unit (CPU) does the "thinking," and uses its main memory (often called RAM, or random access memory) to hold programs and data. The computer used the CRT or television monitor to talk to you, and you use a keyboard to talk to the computer.

A computer with just these pieces of hardware is a true computer, but has limited usefulness. Peripherals is the general term for devices that kind of hang on the outside or periphery of a computer. They aren't necessary for a computer to be a computer, but they are necessary to be able to accomplish useful work.

Ports: Connection to Other Devices

Every computer expects that you will have a keyboard and a CRT, so connections for these are always built in. Many also have built-in connections for disk drives. Beyond these devices, however, the choice of peripherals is up to you. The computer has connection sockets, called ports, so you can hook up whatever you want.

There are three general types of ports:

-Game ports for connecting joy sticks, game paddles, etc.

- Serial ports for connecting modems, printers (sometimes), and disk drives (sometimes)

- Parallel ports for connecting printers and plotters.

Survival potential

People who take their boats on long weekend or vacation voyages should consider a dinghy or raft should be equipped with enough gear to keep you alive until help can find you. Picking and equipping a liferaft, as with everything else, is a matter of being prepared to withstand any conditions you may come up against. When you make your choices you should ask, "what is the worst I may have to handle?" The better prepared you are to take on anything the elements can throw at you, the more likely you are to be around when the rescuers arrive.

The most advanced boat/boater category is the boater who sails "over the edge," where the boater must expect to be totally self-sufficient for weeks or even months at the time. The long distance cruiser should consider two major pieces of emergency gear; the emergency position indicator radio beacon (EPIRB), and the exposure suit. Let's look at them one at a time.

The EPIRB is a radio transmitter that automatically and continuously sends out a distress signal on the aircraft emergency frequencies. The EPIRB is a last ditch signal that is designed to reach aircraft or commercial shipping in your general area. This signal can be used to find your position, which can be radioed to the closest rescue agency available. In order for you EPIRB to be effective you will have to have good survival potential and be prepared to survive for an extended period before help arrives. The EPIRB has only one function,

Hurray for Hollywood

Ever since the days of D.W. Griffith and Rudolf Valentino the movies have captured the imagination of the country. Through war and peace, depression and prosperity movies have reflected the mood of America and shaped its national psyche. But perhaps film's most important contribution has been as the source of questions for game shows, trivia contests and bar room arguments.

Next time you get stumped by the qustion "who were the female leads in the three versions of A Star Is Born?" don't head for the hills, head for the library. The collections of the Virginia Beach Public Library

Marriage myths

Misconceptions grow like weeds around any institution. Marriage has its own crop and they're dangerous: believe in them and you run the risk of doing serious harm to your relationship.

Dr. Barbara Russell Chesser, a social scientist at Baylor University, recently examined some of the most common marriage myths.

"It's the quality of time you spend with your spouse that's important, not the quantity." According to a study of more than 3000 couples who described their marriages as "strong" and "close," over 90 percent said they spend "a great deal of time together." Divorced couples reported they usually spent little time together before their breakup.

"Anger has no place in marriage." Carlfred Broderick, professor of sociology at the University of Southern California, says, "Anger works like a smoke detector. It warns you of danger so you can take appropriate action." Anger should be expressed, analyzed and resolved -- never simply swallowed.

"Hard times or crises bring marriage partners closer together." This can happen, but often doesn't. Serious crises, such as the loss of a job, a family member's serious illness or sudden death, are statistically more likely to result in divorce as the partners find it easier to flee than to struggle with difficult emotions.

"Happily married people never unload personal problems on their spouses." One family-relations specialist estimates that among 85 percent of the couples he has worked with, as least one partner was stewing over something without telling the other. While people are afraid of appearing vulnerable in front of their spouses, it is this very opening up that encourages deep intimacy.

"When all else fails, divorce provides a chance to begin new lives." If only it were so! Divorced couples frequently only exchange one set of problems for another.

Chesser said that divorce should be available for adults whose marriages are absolutely irreparable, but for the majority divorce is not the answer. What is needed is the development of a marriage based on realistic expectations and tolerance of imperfections. They are, after all, the ingredients of a strong and successful marriage.

Special Sessions

Virginia Beach City Council has a scheduled two special Council sessions during July when only two formal meetings will be held on the first and second Mondays.

Council will have a holiday on the third (July 16) and fourth (July 23) Mondays and would not meet on the fifth Monday (July 30).

The first special session will be on July 2 at 12:30 p.m. for the election of the mayor and vice mayor for the next two years.

The regular formal session will start at 2 p.m.

The second special session is scheduled for 12:30 p.m. on July 9, rather than 2 p.m. The informal session that day will be at 11 a.m.

Holiday Inn

Sprucing up image of nurses topic of workshop

Sprucing up the image of nurses will be the topic of an Old Dominion University workshop Friday, June 22, at the Holiday Inn Executive Center in Virginia Beach.

To be held from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m., "Enhancing a Profitable Hospital Image: Developing Your Personal and Public Competitive Edge" is designed for health professionals who are interested in improving their personal and professional image.

Barbara A. Smith, a registered nurse who has served as a consultant nationally, is the guest speaker. President and founder of California-based Image Associates, Smith will focus on how self-confidence and self-development can improve patient care.

"Our focus is on the whole person--how you feel about yourself affects how others feel about you," Smith said. "Nurses serve as role models to patients, and it is important that they exemplify an image of health and wellness."

A recipient of the American Journal of Nursing Scholarship Award and a cum laude graduate from Boston University's School of Nursing, Smith also specialized in hospital public relations, employee productivity, recruitment, retention, marketing strategies and management.

The cost of the one-day workshop is $95.

For more information about the ODU workshop call the university's Office of Continuing Education in the School of Sciences and Health Professions at 440-4256.

Loves his job

Traffic controller named Oceana's top sailor

The calm, relaxed manner of Air Traffic Controller Second Class (AC2) John Wilder seems to contradict his role of air traffic controller. Yet those traits, coupled with his self-confidence, are the very essence of a professional in the hectic, tense air traffic control environment. These characteristics also lend to his professional attitude in other duties as a Navyman and led to his selection as the current Naval Air Station Oceana Sailor of the Quarter.

At 31, Wilder has been doing the job he "loves as much as a pilot loves flying" since he was 18 years old. He has prior service with the Air Force, both active duty and reserve. He has been in the Navy for two years, although the "hash marks" below his second class rating badge indicate twelve years of military service. Keeping his Air Force Reserve status, Wilder joined the FAA from 1977 to 1981 and was among those caught up in the walkout.

Wilder's reserve status prompted the Navy to contact him for active duty. Accepting because he loves the work and would be useful to the Navy, Wilder adds, "I feel that I can give something back."

And that he does! NAS Oceana is the only all-Navy, 24-hour air traffic control facility. Wilder notes, "We can be just as busy at 2 a.m. or two in the afternoon." He is the facility watch supervisor, one of only nine people qualified, proficient and trusted in the tower, radar room, and to handle operations coverging 28,000 square miles of airspace. Wilder admits, "there's a lot of weight on your shoulders."

Wilder's off-duty time is spent with Air Traffic Control (ATC) Facility co-workers as assistant coach for the ATC softball team and as a player on the facility's golf team. Work commitments in the past have prevented the Meridian, Mississippi native from obtaining an associate's degree in airport management, but he intends to begin classes this winter at Tidewater Community College.

A new breed of father, Wilder assisted in the birth of his daughter Casey. He feels that his involvement with the birth process has helped develop a closeness with his daughter and his wife, Ann.

As Sailor of the Quarter, Wilder received a $50 Savings Bond from the Sovran Bank on station, tickets to Busch Gardens, a dinner at Red Lobster and dinner for two at the NAS Oceana Seahorse Club, a station plaque and Letter of Commendation, all presented by Captain C.L. Tinker, NAS Oceana Commanding Officer.

Calm and collected - That's what AC2 John Wilder had to be to become Oceana Naval Air Station's Sailor of the Quarter.

Skateboard controversy

It used to be tree houses, but the up and coming project for backyard builders these days is skateboard ramps.

The kids apparently make the structures out of plywood and invite their friends over. Eddie and Betty Ann Hall of Jack Frost Road say they spent $5000 on theirs.

The trouble starts when neighbors complain, so much so that the skateboard ramps have become a problem for the courts.

When Linda Theurer, of Duke of York Quay was cited by the City's Department of Permits and Inspections because of her son's ramp, she decided to appeal the decision in Circuit Court.

The City Attorney's office has determined that the ramps are illegal under zoning ordinances. The ramps are considered recreation structures and are not permitted in residential neighborhoods.

A group of young boys from the Little Neck area do not see things that way and are petitioning Council for help. Councilwoman Reba McClanan said she has received calls from both ramp owners and neighbors who complain about the noise generated by the skateboarding.

Six of the youngsters, all students at Kingston Elementary School, showed up at a recent informal Council meeting accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Bill Evans, parents of one of the boys, Jack Evans.

Council welcomed the boys but took no action pending the outcome of litigation.

Beach man honored by NARF

Virginia Beach resident Robert Garling was recently honored by being selected as the Employee of the Quarter of the Product Planning and Control Department of the Naval Air Rework Facility (NARF), Norfolk.

A planner/estimator, Garling was cited in the selection as being responsible for the set up of the Aircraft Service Period Adjustment (ASPA) concept and for heading a field modification team that was responsible for the update of approximately 25 aircraft at NAS Oceana.

Six Beachers

Locals earn U.S. Coast Guard captain's license

Six Virginia Beach residents have become licensed charter captains recently by completing a special training course conducted by Houston Marine Training Services and passing the U.S. Coast Guard licensing exam. The new captains can now carry passengers for hire.

In preparation for the exam, the students were drilled on rules of the road, safety, firefighting, emergency and distress signals, as well as the principles of navigation and seamanship, by Houston Marine Instructor, Jim Zook.

The testing for the three Coast Guard licenses, motorboat operator, inland oprator and ocean operator, was conducted by an official of the Baltimore regional Coast Guard office. After passing the comprehensive test, the graduates were issued licenses by the Coast Guard.

The new captains are: William St. Lawrence, John O'Donnell, Charles Hardy, Craig Paige, Michael Halperin and Sterling Thacker, all of Virginia Beach.

Beach Garden Park opens

On Wednesday, June 20, the City of Virginia Beach formally dedicated the Beach Garden Park. The park is located at 2700 Holly Road. The former sewage treatment plant has been transformed into a garden park with the help of many community garden clubs, civic leagues and other community concerns.

At one time this eighteen acre park used German P.O.W.'s for construction of a perimeter dike for a settling pond. Once, a robbery suspect held at the beach jail flushed his money down the toilet to escape being caught with the evidence. The Police Chief alerted the treatment plant and as predicted the money surfaced a few minutes later. The plant employees and police spent the rest of the afternoon washing and drying the money.

In memory of Jesse Mercer

Francis E. Mercer has contributed $500 for the development of a police K-9 cemetery in memory of his brother Jesse M. Mercer.

The late Mr. Mercer founded the Garden of the Pines Pet Memorial on Salem Road and permitted the use of his cemetery for the burial of police dogs at minimal cost.

Virginia Beach City Council recognized the Mercers in a resolution adopted recently and accepted the gift.

Mercer said the gift is only a beginning and that he intended to add to it in the future.

The only request Mercer had is that an inscription on the monument at the cemetary read, "Donated in Memory of Jesse M. Mercer."

VBEA awards scholarships

The Virginia Beach Education Association recently awarded eight enrichment and four college scholarships to students in the Virginia Beach City Public Schools.

Receiving scholarships for programs offered by the school system were: Ngoc Dany (Lynnhaven Elementary School); Amy Emberton (Great Neck Jr. High); Sherry and Monica Weng (Arrowhead Elementary School); and, Priscilla Coffren (Vocational-Technical Center). Jennifer Guyer (Kempsville High School) will be attending Corcoran School of Art in Washington, DC. Brian Caton (Plaza Junior High School) received a scholarship to assist him in attending a Young Writers' Workshop at the University of Virginia. Ivanna Abia (Kellam High School) will attend Techniques in Observational Astronomy at Ball State University in Indiana. Katrina Hastings (Kempsville High) will receive a scholarship to attend Berklee College of Music in Boston, Massachusetts. College scholarships included: Patricia Causey (Princess Anne High); George Phelps, Jr. (Kempsville High); and Tracey Corey (Princess Anne High).

Young Republicans out to register voters

Tidewater Young Republicans and the Old Dominion College Republicans will sponsor a voter registration drive Saturday, June 23. Participants should rally at Haygood Shopping Center at 10 a.m. for a brief orientation and will then go door to door.

Challenged by the Democrats' drive that has already registered 90,000 new voters in Virginia, the Reagan-Bush Campaign has set 12,000 new voters as their Tidewater goal. Saturday's objective, according to a spokesman, is to register 800 new Virginia Beach voters. The YR's and CR's see this as both a critical project, and one in which they can contribute greatly.

The voter registration drive will be followed by a swim party. Volunteers may contact Gary Byler at 490-9700 or 464-6594.

Alberos celebrate 50th

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Albero of Virginia Beach, recently celebrated their 50th Wedding Anniversary in Washington Township, New Jersey. After a Nuptial Mass, where the couple renewed their marriage vows, a reception was held in their honor, given by their children: Carl Alero; Rose Ann Denton of Virginia Beach; Andrew Albero of Washington Township; Michael Albero of Wheaton, Illinois and Richard Albero of New Platz, New York. The reception was attended by 200 friends and relatives of the couple. After spending twelve days revisiting the area and friends, the couple recently returned to their home in Virginia Beach.

Too much jargon for you? Here is the situation: at some point you are likely to want disk drives, a modem to talk to other computers, and a printer all connected to your computer at once. So, a general rule is: you want one serial port for the modem, one parallel port for the printer, plus connection for the disk drives if they're not built-in. And, if you want to play arcade-style video games, you will want a game port.

There is a national standard for serial connections: RS-232. Furthermore, nearly all devices by independent makers of peripherals use a DB-25 connector for RS-232 connections. Some computer manufacturers use different connectors, so if you buy their computer you almost have to buy peripherals from them. If you don't like that arrangement (I don't), look for the magic words RS-232 and DB-25.

Every independent printer manufacturer offers a printer with a parallel connection, and nearly all of these are "Centronics-compatible." If you computer has a Centronics-compatible parallel port, then there are a lot of different printers you can choose from. Otherwise you may have to buy a printer made by the computer company, or pay extra for an adapter.

One more note on ports: on some computers, two or more ports may be built in, and included in the advertised price; on other computers, not a single port comes for free -- you may have to spend another $100-300 just so you can hook up a printer. And that's not counting the cost of the printer!

Mass Storage: Diskette or Cassettes?

The main memory (RAM) of a computer is fast, but it's also relatively expensive. Worst of all, all data in RAM is lost when you turn off the power (some exceptions will be discussed in a future column). The easiest solution is to provide the computer with a larger amount of cheaper memory for long-term storage. This is also called secondary memory or mass storage.

Do you need floppy disks, or will a cassette tape fill your needs? If all you want to do is use your computer as a terminal for the school mainframe, a simple computer with a cassette tape interface may be acceptable for you. While they may be cheap and reliable, however, they are S-L-O-W.

So you will almost certainly want diskettes, or floppy disks. Most home computers are now available with 5-¼ inch floppies, but the amount of characters (bytes) they can store varies enormously. Some of the smallest store only 140k bytes (1k = 1000); the largest store over 2600k -- on the same size piece of plastic!!

Look very carefully at the specifications on disk drives, since the performance varies so greatly. The ones on my computer can store 190k bytes, and even at that it seems I'm forever changing disks. In my opinion, storing less than 170k bytes one side of a floppy diskette is preposterous.

For reasons that will become clear when you try to copy a diskette, I suggest that you not even consider getting fewer than two disk drives. You can live with it if your budget is very limited, but you'll save yourself a lot of grief if you have two.

The Lighter Side

Vinegar stops the sting

By CHUCK FAULKNER

Squirrels, Keeping Them Away - Mix a box of moth balls crushed to a powder with equal parts of talcum powder. Sprinkle it around your attic and porch.

Or mix together two cups of flours, one ounce of tabasco sauce and one tablespoon of red pepper. Add enough water to make a thin paste. With a paintbrush, paint the trunk of the tree and the tops of the branches. It works.

Stamps, Removing From Envelopes - Simply put the whole envelope, or the piece with the stamp attached, in cold water for ten to fifteen minutes. It'll come off easily and won't lose its color.

Starching, Made Easy - To prevent your iron from sticking to the clothing, add a few drops of turpentine to the starching water and your iron will glide over the clothes.

Or add one half teaspoon of salt to the starch.

Or you can add one tablespoon of lard to the starch.

Also, if you want collars and cuffs stiff, it's a lot easier to starch them with liquid starch in an old roll-on deodorant bottle. Gently pry out the roll-on ball with liquid starch, press the ball back in, and presto just roll it onto the desired area.

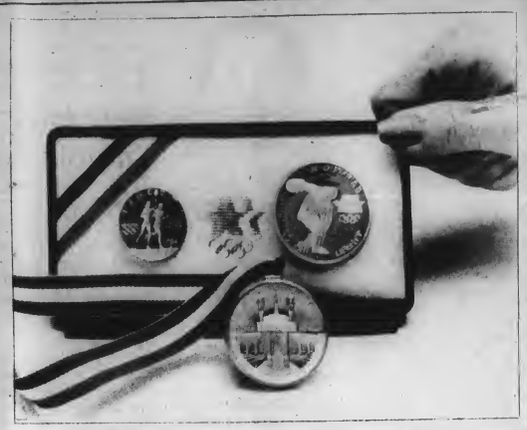

Steak, Tenderizing - Rub both sides with pure lemon juice using the fingertips. Then do the same thing with olive oil. Allow it to stand for ten minutes, then place under the broiler or in the pan.

Steak Or Chops, Cooking - Never stick a fork in steaks or chops while cooking them, whether they're fried or grilled. That lets the juice out.

Stings - Apply a piece of soft cloth soaked in white vinegar to the spot. Hold it on until the pain stops.

Or rub honey onto the affected area. This is particularly good for bee stings.

Stockings, Silk - At first wearing, rub the toes and heels with a piece of beeswax. They'll last twice as long because the beeswax strengthens them.

Olympic coins available

U.S. Olympic Commemorative Coins are now available at local banks. The U.S. Treasury is minting these gold and silver coins to commemorate and support the Olympic effort. The coins from left to right, are the 1984 $10 gold piece, the 1984 Olympic silver dollar and the 1983 Olympic silver dollar. Coins can be purchased singularly or in sets. They are available at Virginia Beach Federal Saving & Loan, 210-25th Street, Virginia Beach, 23451, (804) 428-9391.

AT&T long distance calling turns digits into dollars

Millions of AT&T long-distance customers can turn their dialing into dollars toward name-brand merchandise and services such as airline tickets, appliances, home computers and clothing, AT&T announced today.

"We've undertaken this one-of-a-kind program for long-distance customers to give them even more than quality telephone service," said Kenneth L. Garrett, vice president-marketing of AT&T Communications, the AT&T unit that provides long-distance and international services.

"By offering a dollar of purchasing power for every dollar of calling, the program provides extra value with AT&T Long Distance Service."

Nearly 30 companies -- including General Electric, TWA, Polaroid and Howard Johnson's -- are participating initially, offering more than 50 products and services. AT&T expects that number to grow to hundreds as the program evolves.

Known as AT&T Opportunity Calling, this joint promotion allows customers who make long-distance calls using AT&T to receive credits that can be applied toward the purchase of certain merchandise and services.

The program does not affect telephone rates, and credits cannot be applied toward telephone bills.

The discounts are being provided by the manufacturers and suppliers at no cost to AT&T, and apply to clothing, home appliances, carpeting, sports equipment, moving services, tools, furniture, home computers and trucks.

A number of travel offers also are available, including reduced prices for car rentals, railroad tickets, tours, cruises, airline tickets and hotel rooms.

Credits will be retroactive to April 1984 telelphone bills for those enrolled before July 31.

Customers who make $15 to $300 of AT&T long-distance calls each month will earn one dollar of credit for every dollar of long-distance calling within the United States and to Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands.

For example, a customer whose AT&T long-distance calls total $18 in a month would earn $18 of credits for that month. If the customer's long-distance calls totals $14, no credits would be earned.

AT&T customers who make an average of $11 a month in AT&T long-distance calls will be enrolled automatically and will receive a package in the mail next month explaining the program. The package also will contain a catalog describing the offers from participating companies.

Customers do not earn credits for local calls, international calls, long-distance calls made with companies other than AT&T, phone rental charges and taxes.

AT&T will record the credits automatically and send customers quarterly statements. However, some customers served by independent telephone companies will be given forms to submit toll records to AT&T.

The credits can be used two ways: as cash, when customers make purchases, and for rebates, after customers make purchases.

To use the credits as cash, the quarterly statement will include a form for ordering savings certificates from AT&T. Each savings certificate, which will be honored like cash at all locations that sell the merchandise or service a customer is buying, will be made out for a specific dollar amount toward the purchase customers specify.

With the rebate option, customers can purchase merchandise whenever they want after June 1--even before they've earned the necessary credits. Reimbursement will be sent to customers who meet any proof-of-purchase requirements of the participating company.

The past in the present in Colonial Williamsburg tours

In the "violent heats" of July and August, more than a quarter-million visitors come to Colonial Williamsburg. They find refreshment in storied taverns and vine-canopied gardens, stroll pathways where royal governors and founding fathers trod, touch the past in dwelling and public buildings redolent of 18th-century life. Tours, escorted and self-guiding, enhance learning opportunities, with a brigade of costumed interpreters waiting to show and tell.

One tour begins in the visitor's automobile where South England Street narrows to seven-mile-long Country Road. Connecting Colonial Williamsburg and Carter's Grove plantation, the single lane of gravel and asphalt plunges through dappled woods, skirts meadow fenced with split rails, leaps marsh and ravine spanned by planks.

At road's end looms Carter's Grove. Banked by billowing boxwood, shaded by massive tulip trees more than a century old, the Georgian mansion commands a sweeping view of the James River. Two hundred years ago an observer called it "one of the most elegant habitations in Virginia."

Tour groups express awe at its richly paneled rooms endowed with antiques and period reproductions. Fingers brush carved Virginia pine and rosy brick smoothed by time. Gashes on the handrail of the walnut staircase revive the legend that, during the revolution, British officer Banastre Tarleton left the marks with his sword -- while on horseback.

Outside, visitors look down on a broad floodplain, a section of it checkered with garden plots like those plantation field hands worked. Nearer the water, roped areas mark excavation sites of Wolstenholme Towne, discovered when Colonial Williamsburg archaeologists probed for traces of Carter's Grove outbuildings. They unearthed instead evidence of a massacre that happened more than three and a half centuries ago. A re-created corner of the palisaded fort that guarded the doomed English settlement lends dimension.

Colonial Williamsburg's popular Patriot's Pass, recently reduced from $21 to $18 for adults, provides unlimited admission for a year to Carter's Grove, the Governor's Palace, exhibition and craft buildings, and a special two-hour guided tour of the Historic Area. Students 13-17 pay $12; for ages 6-12 the price is $9. The 13-admission Basic Ticket is scaled at $12, $8, and $5 for the categories, with add-on tickets available at $4 each to Carter's Grove, the Palace, and escorted walking tours.

Three special programs emphasize children's activities.

Several black history programs provide insights to the Afro-American experience in 18th-century Williamsburg. Summer days at 1:30 adults as well as children gather at the Courthouse of 1770 for tours that shed light on "The Other Half."

Thursday evenings in the Williamsburg Lodge auditorium, "On Myne Own Time" dramatizes life-styles in a slave-oriented society.

Refreshing fragrances

Fashion Focus

By Carol Pretlow

When all is said and done, there is probably nothing that can make you feel more like a woman than fragrance. Not only can it set the tone for your spirits and personality, it is at the very least a source of refreshment.

This season the biggest news is body sprays. Called deocolognes by the industry, these fragrances can be used lavishly all over the body. Make your selection from the Body Flower Collection by Gillette, Jean Nate's Energizing Body Spray or the Faberge Collection. If you're the slightest bit adventurous or if you have the taste but not the pocketbook for designer fragrances, try the Irresistible Imposters Body Spray. Emulating L'Air Du, Temps, Opium, Charlie and Jontue, these scents are cool fun.

Don't think lightness is only available in body sprays. Estee's Lauder's White Linen, Candace Bergan's Cie and Christian Dior's Diorissimo are a few favorites from past Summers. Joining the line-up this Summer are scents that make the transition from office to leisure easy. The young at heart will fall in love with Beret by Louis Phillipe Ltd. Fleur de Fleurs by Nina Ricci or Fracas by Alfin Fragrances will take you to Paris with just one drop. Be on the look-out for Paloma Picasso's fragrance of the same name. Paloma has given this new venture the same impact she once gave her jewelry designs.

Give your body extra coolness by refrigerating your favorite colognes and toilet waters. For intermitent coolness during your work day, try putting your special smell in a purse size atomizer.

Fragrance continuity, provided by using the same scents in soap, dusting powder, lotion and bath oil, will allow you to simplify your buying.

Femininity and fragrance might not by synonymous but their copartnership certainly can make you fell special.

Oceana West Industrial Park

Hudgins Construction bags $2 million job

Hudgins Construction has received a $2 million contract to build a 32,000 square foot office building for Advanced Technology at Oceana West Industrial Park, Virginia Beach. Advanced Technology specializes in management sciences and is headquarter in Reston, Virginia.

The office building is being built under a construction management agreement in which both the architect and construction firm are hired simultaneously by the owner. The result is a team design effort.

Planning for the office building has begun; by September 1984 construction will begin with completion in July 1985.

According to Bronson F. Byrd, vice-president, Advanced Technology, Hudgins Construction was chosen because of their "outstanding data processing capabilities including project estimating, CPM forecasting and financial controls."

Hudgins Construction, a Newport News based thirteen year old commerical construction firm, has selected Charles Snyder as project manager.

State optometrists elect Virginia Beach doctor

Dr. Kenneth A. Lebow, a Virginia Beach doctor of optometry, was recently elected president-elect of the Virginia Optometric Association. The election was part of the annual state convention held in Williamsburg. Dr. Lebow will also serve as the Chairman of the professional association's Executive Committee.

Kenneth Lebow received his doctorate of optometry from the Pennsylvannia College of Optometry, specializes in contact lenses, pediatric vision care and subnormal vision, and is a member of the Virginia Society to prevent Blindness and the Association of Children with Learning Disabilities. The Virginia Beach optometrist also is a fellow in both the Virginia and American Academies of Optometry and is a nationally known lecturer on contact lenses.

Dr. Lebow was also reappointed to chair the association's education committee which recently supervised education courses with over 375 optometrists in attendance, representing sixteen states.

The Virginia Optometric Association is the statewide professional association representing over 325 doctors of optometry. It is affiliated with the American Optometric Association.

What's happening in New York

As New York's Museum of Modern Art celebrates its reopening and the inauguration of its expanded facilities, Museum Tower, the luxury-condominium residence above the museum, marks a sales record.

Charles H. Shaw, president of the Charles H. Shaw Co. and developer of Museum Tower with the DeMatteis Organizations, reports condominium sales are now approaching the $100 million mark.

The tower rises 52 stories above the museum's main floor on 53rd Street, just off Fifth Avenue. While the Museum of Modern Art and Museum Tower are legally separate entities, the two are integrated physically into a single structure, the exterior of which was designed by Cesar Pelli.

"Our sales success and the caliber of our owners reflect to a large extent the prestige that the Museum of Art symbolizes throughout the world," Shaw said.

In 1979 Shaw's investment group purchased the air rights over the Museum of Modern Art for $17 million, thereby providing a major impetus to the museum's fund-raising campaign for its expansion and addition of the new west wing under Museum Tower.

Standard condominium amenities include luxury-size room dimensions, nine-foot ceilings, teak herringbone flooring, air conditioning/heating with individual room controls and marble vanities.

Penthouse features include private terraces, fireplaces, libraries, wet bars, maid's quarters and laundry rooms.

Diagnostic service announces new staff members

Doctors' Diagnostic Services, a new concept in cardiology, pulmonary, and neurology testing located in Virginia Beach, has recently announced the addition of three technologists and a business manager to its staff.

Regina Abbott was named technical director of the clinical neurophysiology laboratory. She has a degree in business education from Pierce Business College, Boston; completed EEG training at Children's Hospital Medical Center, Boston; and is registered by the American Board of Registration of EEG Technologists. She has worked in the neurophysiology field for 14 years.

Kenneth A. Brown Jr. was named technical director of pulmonary diagnostic services. He has a degree in biology from Boston College, is a registered nurse, and is a certified and registered cardiopulmonary technologist. He has worked in the cardiopulmonary field for 12 years.

Christina McGonagle was named cardiac diagnostic technician. She is a registered nurse with a degree from St. Mary's School of Nursing in Huntington, W.Va. She has worked in the intensive care and emergency services areas for eight years.

Gene S. Evans was named business administrator. He has a business education background from the University of Alaska and Ohio State University. His business experience in Hampton Roads spans 18 years and covers a broad spectrum of retail businesses and medical management.

Small Business One-Stop Shop and Clearinghouse opens

Small business owners in Virginia now have a single source of information within state government to answer their questions about government licenses, permits and regulations or financing and management assistance.

During his recent Small Business Week luncheon address, Governor Charles S. Robb announced the formation of a Small Business One-Stop-Shop and Clearinghouse within the Virginia Division of Industrial Development. From this office, he said, Virginia's small business men and women can obtain needed information about state government small business programs and other small business assistance available from local Chambers of Commerce or city and county economic development agencies.

The office was created to enable the owners of smaller enterprises in Virginia to quickly and efficiently obtain information or assistance. Small business owners needing assistance available through the One-Stop-Shop/Clearinghouse can write: Small Business Coordinator, Virginia Division of Industrial Development, 1000 Washington Building, Richmond, Virginia 23219.

Cable TV

John P. Frazee, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. John P. Frazee of Virginia Beach, has been elected chairman of the Cable Satellite Public Affairs Network (C-SPAN) by its Board of Directors. Frazee is group vice president-Centel Video Services for Centel Corporation, based in Chicago.

C-SPAN, the public affairs cooperative of the cable TV industry, provides live coverage of the U.S. House of Representatives in session, congressional hearings, policy speeches and other events which impact national issues. The network also features live call-in shows where viewers can comment or question elected officials and other newsmakers.

John Frazee

Frazee, 39, has been a member of C-SPAN's Board since 1982. For the past year, he had served as C-SPAN's Treasurer and is a member of the network's executive committee.

In accepting C-SPAN's chairmanship, Frazee said, "The response from viewers of C-SPAN's election coverage and other programs, as well as widespread acclaim from media critics and journalists, indicates that the network has been enormously successful in providing fair and balanced coverage of our nation's governmental process and other critical public affairs issues."

Frazee, a native of Richmond, Virginia, joined Centel in 1972. He held a number of key roles in the company's telephone operations before being named vice president-corporate development in 1978. With responsibility for new businesses and acquisitions, Frazee was instrumental in Centel's entry into the Cable TV industry. In 1981 he was named to his current position.

Conference merges eastern and western religious traditions

A rabbi, a minister, a Hindu holy man, and a Sufi master will come together to discuss "Practicing the Presence of God: East and West" at a five-day conference to take place June 25-29 at the Association for Research and Enlightenment, Inc. (A.R.E.), 67th Street and Atlantic Avenue, Virginia Beach. The keynote speakers are:

Rabbi Herbert Weiner, who has served as spiritual leader of Temple Israel in New Jersey since 1949 and has been ranked with Martin Buber and Gershom Scholem as a profound and lucid exponent of the Jewish mystical tradition. Currently, Rabbi Weiner teaches Jewish mysticism at Seton Hall University in New Jersey.

Richard H. Drummond, Ph.D., professor of Ecumenical Mission and History of Religious at the University of Debuque Theological Seminary. Dr. Drummond has made one of the most careful and scholarly comparisons of the Edgar Cayce readings with modern Christian throught in his book, Under the Churches: Jesus Christ, Christianity and the Edgar Cayce Readings.

His Holiness Param Sant Manav Dayal Dr. I.C. Sharma, professor of philosophy at Cleveland State University. Dr. Sharma is a native of India and has done an extensive comparison between Hinduism and the readings of Edgar Cayce the results of which appear in his distinctive book, Cayce, Karma and Reincarnation.

Abdul Aziz Said, Ph.D., professor in the School of International Service at American University in Washington, D.C., and author of 11 books dealing with world powers, international policies and the use of diplomacy. Abdul Aziz Said belongs to the Sufi order and is noted for his ability to help others find a sense of the presence of God in their lives through music, dance and the spoken word.

The conference, which also includes a showing of the film, "The Lost Years of Jesus," at 8 p.m. on June 27, will offer in-depth daytime sessions with the keynote speakers and A.R.E. staff. For registration information Beach people may call the Registrar at 428-3588.

Jennifer Robb, youngest daughter of Virginia's Governor Charles S. Robb and Lynda Johnson Robb, turns the table on the photographer taking a family picture in Capitol Square in Richmond. The first family gathered to kick off Virginia's first vacation photography contest, cosponsored by Eastman Kodak Company. The contest has 23 prizes, including the top award of $1,000. It is open to both amateurs and professionals who submit black and white photographs or color slides of exciting vacation opportunities in Virginia. Complete rules and an entry form can be obtained by stopping in one of Virginia's 30 Travel Information Centers or by writing "Photography Contest," Virginia Division of Tourism, 202 North Ninth Street, Suite 500, Richmond, VA 23219. The contest ends September 15.

Tidewater Tides "Search For The Great American Dog"

The Tidewater Tides will conduct a "Search For The Great American Dog" night Wednesday, June 27.

As part of the promotion, fans who present proof of purchase from a bag of Ralston Purina Dog Chow will receive complimentary admission to the 7:30 p.m. game at Met Field between the Tides and the Syracuse Chiefs.

Every fan attending the game will receive coupons for discount purchases of Dog Chow, information on the "Search For The Great American Dog" contest and the chance to win complimentary bags of Dog Chow.

To enter the contest, dog owners submit a recent photograph of themselves (or a family member) and their dog, an essay of 50 words or less explaining why their dog should be chosen, and one weight circle from any Dog Chow package.

Last year, more than 26,000 entries from all 50 states were submitted for the "Search For The Great American Dog" contest. The winner, an English Springer Spaniel, Trapper, owned by 10-year-old Heather Schaefer of Kentwood, Mich., received $25,000, their photo on eight million bags of Dog Chow, and a one-year supply of Dog Chow.

For additional information on the "Search For The Great American Dog" night June 27 at Met Field, contact the Tidewater Tides promotions department at 461-5600.

Green Run grads to study travel

National Business College recently announced that Debra Bosdell and April Bernarde have been accepted into the Travel & Tourism Program for the Fall Term of 1984.

Both women are 1984 graduates of Green Run High School. Bosdell is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bosdell. The two will attend the Roanoke Campus while pursuing their studies.

Long train makes book

Publishers of the Guinness Book of World Records have notified Mrs. Louise Lowenthal, art teacher at Old Donation Center for the Gifted and Talented and coordinator of last year's "Going for the Guinness" sand castle during the Neptune Festival, that the achievement of Virginia Beach students should be listed in the new editions of the Guinness book.

The editor of the world record book called the nearly two mile-long sand railroad train constructed in a single morning "monumental" and said that the "very efficient independent corroboration...meets all our requirements" for establishing a world record.

The editor said barring any unforeseen circumstances such as vagaries of page layout and "the fact that records are essentially perishable" that there is every hope the effort will be included in the forthcoming new editions of the new Guinness book.

If you are interested in more than just movie trivia, the library is still a wonderful source. There are rich and detailed histories of the industry, such as Kevin Brownlow's The Parade's Gone By... or Movie-Made America by Robert Sklar. Brownlow's book is a witty and authoritative documentary on film's silent era. It is highlighted by literally hundreds of historic photographs. Sklar's influential history proves how film has impacted American culture. Both books are highly recommended.

Once you have a firm grasp on film history, the next step is to review the history of each individual studio. The MGM Stock Story, The RKO Story and The Warner Brothers Story are all similiar in design. Each volume covers, in year-by-year, film-by-film detail, the output of these famous American film factories. An appealing feature of these (and virtually all movie books) is the abundance of film stills which accompany the text.

The library's film resources are seemingly endless. The true movie buff can turn to books on specific film genres such as gangster movies, westerns, comedies or horror stories. There are books which discuss every detail of famous films such as Gone With The Wind or The Wizard Of Oz. There are books on cult movies (those midnight flicks shown at local theaters), books on the worst movies ever made and even books which are collections of movie reviews. Finally, when you feel you have read enough about the movies, you can make your own. But, of course, you'll first want to dip into one of the library's "how to books."

By the way...if you're still wondering about the answer to the Star Is Born question; Janet Gaynor, Judy Garland and Barbara Streisand were the three stars. See you at the movies.

Time managment program set

Mr. O. Frank Kattwinkel, a local managerial consultant firm representative, will present a lecture entitled "Managing Time Effectively" on Monday, June 25, at 7 p.m. in the Bayside Area Library. Kattwinkel will show how to make the essential, yet elusive resource, time, work in ways never dreamed of. Registration in advance is required for this program. To register, or obtain more information, Beach people may call the library at 464-9280.

Newlight rezoning residents who had earlier successfully opposed an application which would have permitted the sale of pool supplies as a conditional use in an office zone between Old Providence Road and New Providence Road.

When the opposition was asked to rise, these residents also rose in support of the Newlight group.

Smith, who with his wife is an owner of the property, said that he did not consider the property a good place for a residence.

Glenn Croshaw, attorney for the prospective buyer, said that his client and the owner of the adjoining office-zoned property are considering combining the two parcels and building a dental-medical office building there. If the lots are combined, access from Indian River Road can be eliminated altogether, he said.

Roberta Jennings, of the United Civic League, remarked, "You don't want to live there, but we want to live there. We love our community. It's not for you, it's for me. We have room to build and we do have plans."

Councilman John A. Baum said that with encroaching commercial use in the neighborhood the people there now would be driven out of their homes by sheer economics.

Baum said that because of the unpleasant experience in Norfolk with the Redevelopment and Housing Authority, residents here have opposed one. However, without an authority, he said, it is difficult to protect the community. "Everything's so vague," he said.

Baum said that the power of condemnation, which comes with an authority, is useful in low-income neighborhoods because so often the titles are unclear. He said, however, that in this case, it sounded as though the owners have reasonable use of the property as it is zoned.

Muehlenbeck said that the Planning Department at present is busy reviewing the Comprehensive Plan. He said the intent of the CAC was to provide overall plans for all the target areas.

Planning Director Robert Scott said that he recalled the Rezoning was granted in February because of the unsuitability of the site for residential use.

Thomas Jennings of the United Civic League, said that "You have helped us put in a jewel. With rezoning, you will help use bring it down."

Croshaw said he did not know how this application was different from the last.

A move by Jennings to defer the application for 120 days pending preparation of a plan and the revision of the Comprehensive Plan, failed by a vote of 7-3 with Jennings, R. Jones, and L. Jones voting in favor. Councilwoman Nancy Creech was absent.

but it does it exceedingly well; it will signal for help in very remote area. Your job is to stay alive until the EPIRB signal can bring help to you. Also, when you have turned your EPIRB on, leave it on. Do not turn it off to save the batteries. Rescuers will need a steady signal to fix your position. Because it works so well and is heard by so many people it is very important to insure against false alarms. Be sure it is activated only in a genuine emergency.

One way to stay alive until help arrives is the exposure suit, sometimes called a survival suit. Relative newcomers to the emergency equipment scene, they provide flotation and hypothermia protection. While primarily associated with cold water, hypothermia may be induced by temperatures as high as 80 degrees F. so even warm water cruisers may want to consider survival suits. For people who cruise any appreciable distance over water whose temperature is below 70 degrees, exposure suits can extend your potential survival time tremendously.

Examples come immediately to mind. Three fishermen whose boat went down in a Gulf of Alaska storm were buffeted by wind and waves in their liferaft for 30 hours before they reached the shore of an uninhabited island. Their raft was overturned four times and they were continually inundated by storm waves. They spent seven days on the island where they never experienced any temperature above 48 degrees before they were rescued. All three men were in good condition with only minor symptoms of hypothermia when the Coast Guard picked them up. Their life expectancy under the conditions they encountered has been estimated to have been between 40 minutes and one hour if they had not had their exposure suits. Roy Nugent, an international racing sailor, lived to tell the story of sitting for three days on the overturned hull of his racing proa, "Godiva Chocolatier," in the middle of the North Atlantic before he was rescued. He credits his exposure suit with saving his life.

The name of the safe boating game is "Survival Potential." The whole emergency equipment question really boils down to how much extended survival potential you need in the boating you do. And, what kind of equipment do you need to achieve that potential. Each boat/boater will have different needs so each boater should tailor his emergency equipment to those special needs.

front the west because they didn't take part in the horror that befell their country during World War Two? Or will they be more willing to negotiate and compromise because they see their nation falling behind the west in technological fields? Will the average citizen there finally get some relief from tyranny as the new leaders are forced to create a more open society in order to stimulate the new thinking necessary for newer technologies like computers? Or will they become a more repressive society because any sign of willingness to change or to compromise might be taken as a sign of weakness not by the west but by those other lean and hungry men who strive to be Comrade Caesar?

The standard line in the west is that this is an opportunity to influence the Soviets. Well, that is simply not the case. Until a new man emerges in the Kremlin who is secure in his position there will be a continuation of the Cold War as various factions try to prove that they are tough guys. The west doesn't work out agreements in times like these: the world just survives them.

Angel Carpino joins "Great Model Search"

Angel Carpino

Angel Carpino, 15, of Virginia Beach has been chosen a semifinalist in 'Teen Magazine's 1984 "Great Model Search," one of the nation's biggest annual hunts for new modeling talent, the magazine announced in its July edition recently. She now becomes eligible for selection later this year as a contest "super" semifinalist, the next step in winning the competition.

'Teen has a reputation for discovering new talent. Its pages featured Cheryl Tiegs, Christina Ferrare and Cheryl Ladd when they were still unknowns. This year's Great Model Search discovery will appear on the cover of 'Teen, and win a $5,000 modeling contract from The Gillette Company, a 1985 Mazda GLC automobile, a wardrobe and San Francisco excursion from Levi's Women's Wear, and a number of other prizes.

'Teen's Great Model Search has attracted more than 175,000 entries during the past three years. 'Teen's 1981 Model Discovery, Huggy Ragnarsson, the 1982 winner, Paige-Tiffany Hall, and Nicole Harris, last year's winner, have signed with major modeling agencies and "are enjoying successful careers as international models," the magazine reports.

Entry forms for the contest, open to American and Canadian teenagers 12 to 18, are available in current issues of 'Teen Magazine.

Beach ballet students go to "Big Apple"

Wendy Daria, 16, and Elizabeth Madison, 14, of Virginia Beach, have been accepted into the prestigious summer program of New York City's School of American Ballet, one of the world's greatest dance institutions.

Daria and Madison were among 260 selected from 1,618 applicants in 28 cities across the country for the program beginning June 25th and ending July 27th.

Selections were made following an hour-long audition where each prospective student 'performed' before the School's official auditioner. A thorough knowledge of the fundamental ballet positions and exercises was required as well as physical qualifications suited to the demands of the classic dance: a well-proportioned, flexible, coordinated body, legs that easily adopt the turned out position, and a high instep.

The summer program lasts five weeks and consists of daily classes in Academic Ballet, Toe, Character, Variations and Adagio.

Top form - Elizabeth Madison shows shy she was chosen to attend New York City's School of American Ballet this summer.

Cynthia Wright, Kempsville High School with a scholastic average of 3.8750, finalist for the National Merit Scharship, will attend Trinity University where she has been awarded a scholarship. She was a member of the Governor's School for the Gifted and attained the highest score in English of the Junior Engineering Technological Society (JETS) in the nation. She also participated in the Forensic and Spanish Clubs and was a member of the Drama Club for three years.

Street relocation

The portion of 14th Street between Atlantic Avenue and the beach will be relocated northward to accomodate the Sandcastle Motel, Inc.

The motel applied for a closure of 14th Street, an 80-foot improved right-of-way totalling 12,000 square feet. In turn, the applicant will convey to the city property 12.5 feet north of the existing right-of-way equal to the street being closed.

City Council recently approved the request by a vote of 6 to 3 with Councilman W.H. Kitchin III, Vice Mayor Barbara Henley and Councilwoman Reba McClanan dissenting.

ct Professor of Painting and Drawing at the Rhode Island School of Design since 1963. Merkin, born in Brooklyn in 1938, has been associated with the Terry Dintenfast Gallery in New York since 1972, and had a one person show at that 57th Street Gallery in February of 1984.

Merkin's works are in the collections of the Museum of Modern Art and the Whitney Museum of American Art, as well as numerous other important private and public collections. He has received such prestigious awards for his works as the Louis Comfort Tiffany Foundation Fellowship in painting and the Rosenthal Foundation Award from the National Institute of Arts and Letters.

Known for his stylish circa 1930's wardrobe, Merkin's paintings are as urban and witty as his dress and manner. While in Norfolk in 1980 for a show of his art at the Chrysler Museum, Merkin described his paintings as "a stream-of-consciousness souvenirs that seek to make a kind of footnote about something I've done or known or experienced."

Among his upcoming shows are gallery exhibitions scheduled for June in Philadelphia and for October in Rome, Italy. In 1985, Merkin will be one of 12 artist/educators honored in a calendar commemorating the 75th anniversary of Hallmark Cards.

With the high quality of work being provided by the artists at this year's show, the three judges will definitely have their work cut out for them in singling out the award-winning works of art. We wish them well.

Back Bay of "unique" value to Virginia Beach

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

The Back Bay Management Plan proposed by consultants calls for changes in zoning policies, more careful agricultural practices, planting of Bay vegetation and an extension of the city's salt water pumping operation at Little Island.

Consultants conclude that Back Bay and its watershed are of unique environmental, ecological, cultural and economic value to the city and the people of Virginia Beach.

What may be the most controversial of the recommendations, revealed Monday afternoon at a work session, is the extension of the "Green Line" northward and the companion recommendation to amend zoning to eliminate "spot" zoning.

Roy Mann, of Roy Mann Associates, the consultant, said that he understood that the city is concerned with the legality of eliminating spot zoning which would involve rezoning certain properties within the Back Bay area to prevent development. Mann said that actually, the city should be concerned with the legality of not amending the zoning because courts have found this practice illegal.

Carlton L. Noyes, vice president of environmental sciences for Jason M. Cortell and Associates, Inc., Waltham, Mass., employed by Mann, found one of the greatest drawbacks to the study the lack of monitoring in the area. He said the state operates one monitoring station at Hells Point creek. Noyes said the State Water Control Board does not require any monitoring system in connection with hog farms so that although 55,000 head of hogs are raised in the areas adjoining Back Bay, no one knows where the waste in the lagoons is going.

Noyes said that the quality of the water in Back Bay is "not bad," but that the quality deteriorates in the tributaries and in the north.

Recommendations concerning urban development include:

•A land management enhancement strategy which would extend the "Green Line" northward at selected points to protect prime agricultural soils and critical watershed drainage areas and upland wildlife habitat; retention of existing zoning; amendment of zoning to eliminate "spot" zoning; maintenance of current capital improvements programs for the Back Bay and North Landing River watersheds.

An amendment of the Comprehensive Plan to create a new "Back Bay Management District" to articulate goals, objectives and policies for development and resource conservation, extending to all Back Bay watershed lands and waters, those of the North Landing River

On patrol

Clarence Grant, code named "Rest In Peace," is the leader of the South Hampton Roads Chapter of the Guardian Angels. Here he gives instructions for the 7:30 patrol to Brick, Death Wish, Mo, King Tut, Bust, Mad Dog, Stilts and Fred. Photo by Bill McBride.

Guardian Angels "not gonna run from nobody"

By Ronnie Greene
Staff Writer

"I'm not gonna run from nobody," screams the 18-year-old black man, donning a red beret, T-shirt and looking into the eyes of a half dozen of his comrades. "They might pound my head in, but I'm not gonna run."

For Timothy "Soup" Williams, standing up to confrontations is a necessity. As a patrol leader for the Hampton section of the Guardian Angels, Williams is at Plaza Apartments tonight to help train the new Virginia Beach chapter. And yes, Williams has reason to yell. He has just been cut on the thumb with a blade from one of the area "punks."

But Soup doesn't look scared. That's because he has been cut before. And shot. A member of the National Guard, Williams is grown up enough to realize that he must be strong, even in times of disarray.

Soup may even have been a bit lucky. The Guardian Angels, you see, are a group aiming to be "The non-violent safety patrol that is the voice of the people," in the words of state coordinator H.C. "Sidekick" Crews. In other words, they don't carry weapons.

Twenty-four-year-old Sidekick, a third degree black belt and former police officer, says the Angels came to Virginia Beach and Plaza Apartments at the request of Apartment manager Donna Jesneck. Sidekick says his happiest day will come when the Angels have cleaned the streets and no longer need to exist. He confides that day "will never happen."

Tonight, Sidekick will direct a meeting with the Angels and go back to Hampton later in the evening. He will not be around when the Angels patrol the streets on three different one-hour shifts.

The Virginia Beach chapter has 13 members, six of whom area leader Clarence "Rest In Peace" Grant is asking, "Anybody think this might not be what you want to do?" Stonefaced, the Angels stand speechless. This IS what they want and they're ready to go.

So is Rest In Peace. A 20-year-old accounting major at Norfolk State University, Grant is an Angel with grace, speaking with a soft and polite tone. Like Soup says, "most of the credit goes to him." Grant wastes few words. So when he speaks, his crew listens.

"We need everybody we can tonight," yells Soup. "I don't want anybody being lost." Suddenly, I feel a chill. Earlier in the week, I had asked the Angels permission to patrol with them. Now, at the moment of truth, I was lost. What should I do?

"You just walk right beside us," says Soup. OK. Now, Rest In Peace leads the Angels in The Prayer. Like he says, "We're one big family."

The button on Soup's red beret says, "Shake and Enjoy." Somehow, it seems impossible that Timothy Williams is only 18 years old. He has an experienced and mature manner seen normally in men twice his age. "I'm here for anything," he tells the eager Angels. "If you need my help, I'm here. I'm just like a

Beach student competency fares well

This year, 97.9 percent of those taking the reading test for the first time passed it; 97 percent passed the mathematics test. The percentages last year were exactly the same; however, this year, 96.2 percent of those students passed both tests, up by one percentage point from a year ago.

Under State law, students who are not considered ready to take the test are not required to do so in the tenth grade. While some school divisions take advantage of this provision in the law, the policy of school officials in Virginia Beach has consistently been to administer the test to everyone as soon as the student is eligible. In this way, teachers have been able to use the tests as diagnostic tools as early as possible and to provide remediation before a retest. As a result, no student of Virginia Beach Public Schools has failed to pass the required test eventually.

Most of those in Virginia Beach eligible to take the test for the first time completed both tests. Those who missed taking one or both tests because of illness or other absences were scheduled to take the tests at a later date.

The importance of being in school on the days the tests are given is stressed by school officials; each year the percentage of students who miss the tests is well below the six percent average absenteeism in senior high schools of Virginia Beach.

The social studies test may be given even before the tenth grade. Those students who take a social studies course in junior high school are given that test as early as the eighth grade to allow for remediation if needed.

The school system prepares a comprehensive booklet annually which is sent home to parents with students about to take the test. The booklet explains the minimum competency tests and their importance; it also includes sample questions to be used by parents and students in preparing students for the test. For those few who fail the first time, immediate remediaiton efforts are begun.

From the time that the minimum competency tests were mandated by the Virginia Generaly Assembly, the Virginia Beach school system has taken the tests seriously. Virginia Beach developed its own tests originally,

The article says that "Tidewater Virginia has disappeared." But Virginia Beach City Councilman Robert G. Jones seems to think that Virginia Beach art and culture have disappeared in the Cultural Alliance of Greater Hampton Roads.

Jones told Council Monday afternoon at an informal meeting that Virginia Beach was slighted in an article in the June issue of Horizon Magazine on "Arts in Hampton Roads," by Antoinette W. Roades. A companion article by Kellee C. Einhart discusses regionalism in art as practiced by the Cultural Alliance of Greater Hampton Roads to which Virginia Beach belongs.

In fact, Virginia Beach contributed $7,000 to the Metropolitan Arts Congress last year to study the concept.

Jones said he was concerned about whether the Beach was getting its fair share of the Congress funding.

He explained later that Norfolk dominates the Horizon articles. Any article, he said, should mention at least the Virginia Beach Pops, the Friends of Music Concerts, the Maritime Historical

Baum concerned with rural roads

Rural roads in Virginia Beach are terrible, Councilman John A. Baum said Monday afternoon at an informal session.

He suggested that the city start acquiring land for road widening. He said the roads have ditches on each side and no shoulders and the Captial Improvement Plan contains no plans to widen them.

City Manager Thomas H. Muehlenbeck said that he would return with traffic count and other criteria which are used to determine road needs.

Baum said the land along the highway is not valuable and that he would be willing to dedicate part of his land for a road.

Black Heritage Awareness Day to be held at Dome

The Second Annual Black Heritage Awareness Day will be held at the Virginia Beach Dome on Saturday, June 30. Black Heritage Awareness Day proved to be highly successful in 1983 bringing together the accomplishments of local, state and national blacks. This year's program begins at 10 a.m. and concludes at 4 p.m. There is no admission fee.

The 1984 program begins with the gospel choir from Mt. Olive Baptist Church, followed by a fashion show by Owes Fashions. At 12 noon the opening ceremonies will begin. Both Mayor Louis R. Jones and City Manager Thomas H. Muehlenbeck will be present. The Virginia Beach Interdenominational Choir will perform, followed by "Quiet Fire" from Norfolk State University. "Quiet Fire" is being provided courtesy of Cultural Experience Unlimited. The final performance of the day will be the TAM-Orchestra at 3 p.m., with a special break dancing display.

A variety of black businesses will be displaying their wares and skills throughout the day. A variety of international foods will be available free to the public. Free parking is available at Pavilion. The TRT Trolleys will be running between the Dome and Pavilion, fare is $.25.

The City of Virginia Beach Department of Community Housing and Development is sponsoring Black Heritage Awareness Day. For further information, contact Malissia Lee at 463-9511.

What's up ahead

The new city council here will be facing as always new problems, new challenges, and the unexpected. In politics as in life, problems are knots to be untied: challenges met are the cause of the greatest sense of satisfaction, and the unexpected is usually a crisis that is enough to make a full grown adult age visibly.

When people talk of growth, they usually mean their own home town. Virginia Beach has had phenomenal growth in the past twenty years. But there is definitely linkage between the national economy and this city's. While we are in a recovery cycle, everything is going along well, but unfortunately, with our national debt rising as if injected with yeast, recovery may just be a short term matter. So that is a problem the city council faces. Keeping an eye on where the national economy is headed and adjusting local spending accordingly.

Where development should take place. What should that development be. When should development take place. How much growth there should be. These are the challenges that face council this year and in the future. There is much to be weighed and measured, and it is no small matter of concern that water is now controlled for the city by a regional authority. Yet Virginia Beach owes much of its success as a city to the wisdom of past Councils. We are lucky to have the serious people who presently serve us. They will meet the challenges offered.

But the unexpected. Well, this world is full of unexpected happenings. That is what keeps things interesting, and as the Chinese say, "May you live in interesting times." Unfortunately, that is a Chinese curse.

Play it smart

Virginia Beach has had a downright hot June this year, and that has brought lots of folks down to the water to get cooled off, to get tanned, and generally have fun. When it comes to resorts, there is no place better than Virginia Beach.

Now under the right circumstances there is nothing wrong with having alcoholic beverages, but unfortunately there is a growing problem of people having drinks under the wrong circumstances. Drunk driving is an epidemic that has wasted so many lives that it has now become a matter of the most serious consequence. Alcohol abuse in general is responsible for a staggering loss to our gross national product, as well as a source of wasted human resources. To their credit, the alcohol manufacturers and distributors have campaigned for responsible drinking behavior.

The good old days when drunkenness was a matter of a sure fire laugh for a comedian are over. And an appearance before any traffic court judge in Virginia Beach should convince any driver who decided to mix drinking and driving that no one is going to be amused.

So enjoy the sun and the surf at Virginia Beach, and enjoy the relaxing hospitality of the fine restaurants and recreational establishments in Virginia Beach. But play it smart: don't drink and drive.

Olympian thoughts

Thus far the Sun has remained silent on the issue of Soviet block nations withdrawing from the upcoming summer games in Los Angeles, leaving the indignation and supplication to the heavyweights. However, after watching everyone from Olympic Committee officials to presidential contender Jesse Jackson, try and convince or cajole the Russians and their pals into attending with no success, the time has come to break that silence and put forth the only plausible plan.

There is only one world figure with the stature, the recognizability and the personal charisma to convince the Soviets of their error. One man who stands above the politics and emotion which cloud the issue. One man to whom even those rumply old men and women who run the Kremlin must say yes, we will come to the Olympic Games, by golly!

And that one man is Michael Jackson. Could even the most hardened KGB officer turn down the world's cutest living falsetto singer when he offers his white glove in the spirit of international peace and unity? Why hasn't this most obvious of ambassadors already been sent to wrap up this mess? It is time to set aside false modesty and call for the man of the hour. Who knows, maybe the Russians would like us to take away the Pepsi concession currently granted to the Chinese. If Kremlin leaders continue to balk we cut off their music TV.

Letters

Editor, Virginia Beach Sun:

I applaud your newspaper wholeheartedly for giving some of our citizens and elected officials the credit that is due them. Your journalistic approach and unbiased opinions are a refreshing change.

In regards to the "appointment" of our city's next mayor I feel as though all citizens should have a concern in who that is, even though he is elected by his peers on council.

For the past two years, Mayor Louis Jones has demonstrated his leadership abilities in serving our city. He has brought a harmony among council members, the city manager and many other department heads. I'm sure he has spent countless hours in travel and meetings to help obtain our own water system. He has taken his sometimes "ceremonial" position seriously, but I think it's time that someone has taken that attitude. Virginia Beach is a city that is Big Business and should be run as such.

It's difficult for me to see how a council could be unified and working in the city's best interest if the next mayor happens to be the same man who made some "shameless" remarks towards three of our councilwomen two years ago.

Mayor Jones deserves to be re-appointed.

More on Noona

Editor, Virginia Beach Sun:

Thank you for the complimentary editorial about the Virginia Beach Pops, Maestro Walter Noona, and his wife, Carol.

Our Board of Directors, League members, and subscribers are well aware of what an artistic treasure Virginia Beach has in Maestro Noona. We have all worked very hard to keep this multi-talented maestro in this area so that we may continue to enjoy his stimulating concerts.

We appreciate the support of the people of Virginia Beach and surrounding cities. Maestro Noona is constantly being engaged as guest conductor for major symphonies, such as the Baltimore Symphony, the Hartford, Connecticut Symphony, and has recenlty been engaged to conduct the Pittsbury Symphony for two concerts in the coming season. This is an indication that our support of Maestro Noona and the Virginia Beach Pops must remain constant.

Paying token attention

Editor, Virginia Beach Sun:

I am a lover of history and I have a somewhat unusual hobby. I collect old tokens used by stores, barber shops, lumber companies, saloons, forts, and other businesses years ago.

The tokens were "good for" $1.00, 50¢, 25¢, 12½¢ or such in trade or merchandise or "good for" one loaf of break, one drink, one shave, one ride or whatever.

They were usually made of metal, and while having the general appearance of a coin, they were made in all shapes and sizes with some picturing elephants, cows, birds and buildings.

I have reason to believe that some of these tokens were used in your area and I would be most interested in obtaining some of them for my collection.

I would like to hear from anyone having one or more of these tokens or from anyone that might be able to help me. Any help that you can give me of any kind is greatly appreciated.

Child mortality addressed

Editor, Virginia Beach Sun:

Sure, the recession has made it rough on Americans the past few years, with the poverty-level population increasing from 29 million in 1980 to over 35 million at present. This has been a painful but endurable experience for us.

But outside U.S. borders, there have been some actually horrifying developments which worsen with each passing year. UNICEF (not to be confused with UNESCO whose funds President Reagan wants discontinued) reports that in 1983 alone 21 million children died, most by far in Third World countries. The sheer immensity of the problem almost overwhelms the mind. Some nations lose more than 150 of every 1000 live births during the first year of life.

UNICEF has been fighting a losing battle to improve these statistics -- for lack of sufficient funds. They contend that with additional money from the First World they could save 10 million children yearly. They could extend a strategy which they have found to be very effective in the past several years. This strategy, in 1982 for example, involved the use of 900,000 volunteers whom UNICEF trained in basic sanitation, nutrition and health care. The "educated ones" went out on foot to villages to teach and motivate their neighbors -- and achieved excellent results. But limited funds prevented widespread use of this system.

If you think the 21 million kids, which will be lost in the year of 1984, are worth a few moments of concern, there is a very effective way you can help salvage their very lives. Simply exercise your citizenship and write a brief note to your senators, care of the Senate Office Building, Wash., D.C. Ask them to support the Human Needs and World Security Bill. This legislation allocates $250 million to Third World health care and related development efforts. This amount, $1 per American over the next year, is an almost unnoticeable sum when compared to the billions of "security" aid we presently give.

By Mary Ann H. Johnson

In addition to love and tender care, parents give their children food, shelter and clothing. And it is the food, shelter and clothing that bring the financial cost of raising children to astonishingly high sums.

The average cost of raising urban children in the south from birth to 18 years of age is $90,624, said Betsy R. Schenck, Virginia State University Extension specialist in child development. That figure is from the U.S. Department of Agriculture's estimates in June 1983. The average cost of raising rural, non-farm children is about the same--$91,015.

The total costs vary not only by the region of the nation, but by the families' circumstances and by their ideas of what is necessary and desirable in raising children.

A large percentage of the family income goes to raising children: housing--34 percent; food--23 percent; transportation--17 percent; clothing--7 percent; medical care--5 percent; education--2 percent; and other--12 percent.

Housing includes not only the annual costs of the residence, but running and furnishing it. New babies need some special items including a crib and automobile passenger restraint. As they grow, additional pieces of furniture are needed for them.

Food is one of the largest expenditure items in most family budgets. The cost are relatively inexpensive when the children are very young, but they soon begin to climb and continue to climb until the children are grown.

Clothing costs vary from year to year. Clothing requirements for children less than two years old are comparatively low. Often baby clothes are outgrown before they are worn out and so are used a second and even a third time. As children increase their activity, the cost of clothing also increases. A jump in cost comes when children start school. Another jump occurs when they are teens and become sensitive about clothing and have strong feelings about what they want to wear. Replacement of clothing items becomes a major economic issue as they continue to grow rapidly until they reach their full growth.

Other costs include education, medical care, transportation, personal care, recreation and other expenses involved in day-to-day living. The long-term trend of prices is upward, said Schenck, and this will be reflected in the ever-rising cost of raising children.

"But parents think it's worth it," said the faculty member at Virginia State University.

Each locality is also responsible for developing and administering a social studies competency test that meets the unique needs of that locality; Virginia Beach began administering its social studies test a full year before the test was required.

Slide show available through arts center

The Virginia Beach Arts Center is now offering to clubs, groups and organizations a slide show presentation entitled "We're Making The Beach An Arts Center." The program is being provided as part of the Art Center's continuing effort to promote the visual arts in the community and has been designed to educate and inform the people of Tidewater about the Virginia Beach Arts Center.

The presentation will include a brief summary of the nonprofit organization's 30 year history, how it has grown in size and accomplishments, the cultural experiences it makes available to the community, and what direction the Center is headed with its future 4 million dollar facility.

Beach DAV chapter honored

At the Virginia state convention of the Disabled American Veterans held recently at the Cavalier Hotel, Virginia Beach Chapter 20 received the Virginia Department of State Community Action Award. Chapter 20 was cited for outstanding community action and won the award over the other 53 chapters in Virginia.

State Commander Alfred E. Melton presented the award to Chapter 20 Commander Frank Piotrowski.

In an exchange of presentations, State Commander Melton received a plaque of the Seal of Virginia Beach from Commander Piotrowski.

The ladies of the DAV Auxiliary were well represented and State Commander Rita McGuire was presented a plaqye of the Seal of Virginia Beach by Chapter 20 Auxiliary's Commander Harriet Brannan.

PTA awards college scholarships

Three students who attended Brookwood Elementary School received scholarships from that school's PTA when they graduated from high school this month.

Joseph C. Niedbala, graduating from Kellam High, received the Virginia Drewry Scholarship which will provide $400 for his college education.

The Charlie Benson Scholarship, named for the custodial supervisor of the school, is for $300 and was split between Mari Beth Millis of First Colonial High and Anthony R. Del Donna of Princess Anne High. Millis plans to attend The College of William and Mary, and Del Donna will be attending Virginia Commonwealth University.

Open for business

"Quality of life" enhanced

Family Service Center opens at Naval Air Station Oceana

Officially opening the Naval Air Station Oceana Family Service Center recently, Captain C.L. Tinker, Commanding Officer, assured the many guests that the center's goal is to enhance "quality of life" for Navy families. He said that by offering "assistance, education and counsel in areas which do not appear to have any direct relationship to either the Navy or its mission," the center will serve to enhance the Navy family in these changing times.

Captain Tinker, Lieutenant Commander A.R. Miller, Director, and Nancy Marchesani, Deputy Director, snipped the red, white and blue ribbon to officially provide entry to the station's Family Service Center. During the opening ceremonies, Tracey Hall was awarded contest prizes by Captain Tinker for her winning Family Service Center logo design and theme, "you're never alone." A tour of the facility and an open house reception for quests followed.

The establishment of a Navy Family Service Center as NAS Oceana stands as a major symbol of the Navy's concern and support for Navy members and their families. Bringing to life the naval tradition of "Taking care of our own," Navy Family Service Centers are practical, everyday resources which offer something for everyone in the form of support and life enrichment services and programs.

It has long been recognized that Navy personnel and their families have been faced with certain unique problems related to the Navy mission. Frequent relocations, family separations due to deployment and temporary duty assignments, social and often cultural isolation, are a few of the known factors which place strain on Navy personnel and their families. In addition, social trends and patterns throughout the country have undergone extensive changes and living styles in the Navy reflect these trends.

The Navy's interest in family related problems and the overall quality of life and growth potential of its personnel has increased with the awareness that personnel satisfaction with military life is correlated with the quality of one's personal, as well as family, satisfaction and

Virginia Beach, coming of age as a major city, is beginning to flex its muscles.

Councilman Robert G. Jones told Council at an informal session recently that people around the state look to large cities like Virginia Beach for leadership and that it is important to exercise leadership.

As an example of the city's acceptance of its leadership role, Councilwoman Meyera Oberndorf has been elected chairman of the Environmental Quality Committee of the Virginia Municipal League, and Jones, vice chairman of the VML Human Development Policy Committe and chairman of the Legislative Committee.

Jones said it is significant for Virginia Beach to play major roles in the VML.Growing areas like the Beach, he said, have not had sufficient input on policy which has been dictated by an in-group of established cities.

Councilwoman Nancy Creech agreed, and said that although she is not on a VML committee she has been appointed to the House and Senate subcommittee for Highway Review.

Fastest growing sport

Boardsailing becomes an Olympic Sport

By Michael McKeon
Staff Writer

Approximately 350 locals and tourists gathered on the beach at 57th Street Sunday afternoon to watch what has been called the fastest growing sport in America - Boardsailing.

"It (Boardsailing) is going to be the biggest thing around. Anyone from ages 10 to 60, male or female, can compete or just have a good old time," said Michael McGinnis, owner of Sea and Ski Sports at 1017 Laskin Road. McGinnis was on hand to watch and sail in the Virginia Beach stop of the Subaru Boardsailing Series.

The event, the seventh stop of a 14 city tour, was sponsored by Subaru of America and HiFly and featured top female professionals Dana Dawes and Suzan Gedayloo, both of Hawaii. Other stops on the tour have been San Francisco, California and Denver, Colorado. The series moves next to San Juan, Puerto Rico and Miami, Florida.

Boardsailing started in the 1960's and combines the elements of surfing and sailing. "Boardsailing is not a team sport, you compete with and against yourself and the water ocean," Gedayloo said. However, boardsailing can be done on any water, she added. "All you need is some water, the right equipment and a little breeze."

Thirty-one amateurs from around the state competed in a Funboard race competition in three elimination heats and a championship race. All equipment was provided by HiFly.

Brian Stewart, of Virginia Beach, took the first and third heats and Greg Haverstick, of Virginia Beach took the second heat. The championship race was won by Matt Duben, also of Virginia Beach.

Books recommended

Textbooks being recommended for adoption in new courses in the Virginia Beach City Public School System for the 1984-85 school year will be on display at several locations throughout the city beginning this week.

The new courses begin implemented for next year are: Principles of Science 7, Contemporary Science, Marine Science, Algebraic Foundations, Math Applications, World Cultures, Advanced Placement Biology, Advanced Placement Chemistry, and Advanced Placement Computer Science.

New textbooks will be on display at each of the five branches of the Virginia Beach Public Library through July 17. In addition, the books will be on display at the School Administration Building until the day of the regular School Board meeting, Tuesday, July 17, at 10 a.m.

Bicycles permit

PUBLIC NOTICE
CITY OF VIRGINIA BEACH
DEPARTMENT OF HOUSING AND COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT

The City of Virginia Beach announces the availability for public inspection of the Rental Rehabilitation Program grant application. This document will be submitted to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD). The application is available at the Department of Housing and Community development, 3080 Brickhouse Court, Virginia Beach, Virginia, between the hours of 9:00 a.m. and 5:00 p.m., except on holidays. Comments should be submitted to Sylvia Hill at the same address.

The Rental Rehabilitation Program will address the rehabilitation and market rate rental needs in the City because it: 1) preserves rental housing; 2) provides rental assistance to low income persons but maintains freedom of housing choices; 3) makes best use of limited public funds by providing public subsidy necessary to attract investors; 4) separates building and tenant subsidies and thereby encourages good management and maintenance practices by allowing the tenant to take his subsidy and move if the rehabilitated unit rental charges are not acceptable to the tenant; 5) allows maximum local control and a program design most suited for the City of Virginia Beach; 6) encourgages the maximum involvement of investors, lenders, neighborhood organizations and other key parties; and 7) provides rehabilited units which will rent at the neighborhood market rental rate and become a housing resource affordable to unassisted tenants.

The objectives of the Program are to: 1) rehabilitate 25 units of rental property which require moderate rehabilitation and are owned by owners/investors; 2) design a rehabilitation financing model which will provide financial incentives required to attract investors and still be marketable at market rate rents; 3) provide rental assistance with modified or existing Section 8 Certificates/Vouchers to 25 eligible families; 4) monitor the project to determine its significance in achieving the rehabilitation of investor owned units in designated areas; and 5) actively involve investors, lenders and neighborhood organizations in the rental rehabilitation program through meetings, neighborhood inspections and workshops.

The primary concentration of the program will be in Seatack Census Tract 442, Atlantic Park and Census Tract 448.02. Rental rehabilitation assistance will also be available to the following Community Development target neighborhoods presently participating in housing rehabilitation activities: Beechwood, Doyletown and Newlight.

Persons who object to the the approval of this application may submit comments to Mr. G. William Thomas, Area Manager, U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, 701 East Franklin Street, Richmond, Virginia 23219. Such objections should be based on the following grounds: 1) the description of needs and objectives is plainly inconsistent with available facts and data; 2) the program activities are plainly inappropriate to meeting the needs and objectives identified by the City; 3) the application does not comply with the applicable laws; and 4) the program activities are ineligible for funding. Comments should include an identification of the requirements not met. In the case of objections based on one (1) above, comments should include the data relied upon for the objections. Althought HUD will consider data submitted at any time, objections should be sent by July 30, 1984.

And the flag was still there

Robert Engessor, Kempsville Branch Library patron, continues to raise and lower the flag over the library building, but things haven't been the same since May 25.

That's when the flag, a 12-by-18-foot beauty which Engessor paid $175 for "out of my hard-earned money," was stolen.

The city issue, a five-by-eight-foot flag now flying over the library, is too small for the flagpole, Engessor maintains. That's why he replaced it with the grander flag, committing himself to raise and lower it each day.

Engessor expressed his indignation over the theft of the flag before Virginia Beach City Council recently. He said he paid for the flag out of the money he has saved by not paying his real estate taxes. Engessor, who has

Maritime Historical Museum to celebrate anniversary

Surfboat drills, pirate stories, woodcarvers and Shakespearean costumes will highlight the Virginia Beach Maritime Historical Museum's Third Anniversary Celebration this Saturday, from 10 a.m. until 9 p.m. The museum is located at 24th Street and Oceanfront, in the old Seatack Life Saving Station Number 2.

All events and galleries will be free and open to the public.

Alice and Roy White will demonstrate the art of wildfowl carving all day in the museum's gift shop. At 2 p.m. a crew in authentic, turn of the century surfmen's uniforms wil launch a life saving drill.

Dan Hahn will relate piratical legends in the museum's upper gallery at 11 a.m. There will also be a display of Shakespearean costumes, used in the Shakespeare-By-The-Sea Festival scheduled for later this summer.

Arts center adult classes

By Teresa Annas

How would you like to learn about the newest art trends coming out of Manhattan -- and what they mean? Or perhaps you're a still life painter yearning for fresh approaches? Or maybe you would like to master wheel-thrown pottery -- so you can create that set of dishes you've been envisioning for years?

All of these goals are within reach through the Virginia Beach Arts Center's summer season of adult art classes, which begin the first week in July. Called ArtStudio, the program takes place in the Arts Center's studios at 18th Street and Arctic Avenue -- just three blocks from the oceanfront.

Twenty-two classes are scheduled this summer in the media of painting, drawing, three-dimensional design, photography, ceramics, silkscreen, art appreciation and calligraphy. Courses are offered at every level, from rank beginners to professional who want to expand their skills.

Most of the classes run for four weeks and meet one afternoon or evening each week. Exceptions are all ceramics classes (six weeks) and two of the silkscreen classes (eight weeks).

The instructors are well-qualified professionals, and many are veterans of several seasons of ArtStudio.

First impressions of Virginia Beach

By Toni Lohman

A column about my impressions, as a newcomer, of Virginia Beach? Easy. It's big, it's booming and most important, it's warm!

Coming from West Michigan, deep in the snowbelt, I found the balmier climate and lack of snow to be a most agreeable change. Especially since I had recently spent Christmas Day snowbound in below zero temperatures, eating hot dogs for Christmas dinner. The much anticipated turkey dinner was 30 miles away, and unreachable, at my cousin's house.

When I arrived in Virginia Beach in March, I found daffodils in bloom with tulips not far behind. This was a pleasant surprise, since in the North they usually make their appearance in April and late May. Strawberries, however, proved to be an unexpected bonus.

Friends from Michigan, who are ardent strawberry enthusiasts, visited during Memorial Day and were pleased to find that, here in Virginia, big, ripe strawberries were at their peak. The best part of this discovery, for them, was the realization that after returning to Michigan they could indulge their gourmet appetite all over again when the strawberries finally make their appearance in late June. Their delight was uncontained -- two strawberry seasons in one year.

Angels on patrol

The young man guarding the door which encases the Virginia Beach chapter's headquarters will not patrol tonight. Unlike Soup, 23-year-old Reccareo "Fred" Montgomery doesn't look years beyond his age. Although he is soft spoken and mature, Fred has a little boy face that hides his age. Fred won't walk the streets of Plaza Apartments tonight because he has to work from 11 p.m. till 7 a.m. The graveyard shift.

He must work because the Angels are a non-profit organization. They help fight crime for free. So the money Fred makes helps pay for the apartment he and Rest In Peace share. An apartment that is always open to Angels and people in need. Like Soup says, there may not be much food in the icebox, but there is always a warm place to sleep.

An electrical engineer major on an ROTC scholarship at NSU, Fred says many people have a misconception of what the Guardian Angels are. As Sidekick points out, ever since Curtis and Lisa Sliwa started the Angels in New York City in 1979, the group, now numbering 5,000, has stressed violence only as a last resort.

"They're not violent people," Fred says of his fellow Angels. "Some people take it the wrong way." Looking at members such as Serrina Hines, Margaret Shank and Rosa Turner, Fred ponders and says, "It takes a lot of heart to do this. When it's over, you've gotta hang in there and just deal with it."

An exuberent Hines quickly reports to the group that, "They're throwing bottles against the wall." "They" stands for the street punks who despise the Angels. Partially because they oppose the good the Angels represent, Hines says the punks constantly "come around here and start things and pick with the Angels."

At 16 years of age, Hines won't stand for that. "They'd better get me or I'm gonna get them one," she tells her friends. An Angel trainee for a week, Hines joined shortly after her little sister was the victim of a hit and run. After coming to the Angels for help then, Hines liked what she saw.

Being a female, Hines has heard a great deal of gruff from her neighbors at Plaza Apartments. "They tell me that we're going to get killed." What does she do then? "I ignore it and keep walking."

Now the group is outside. There are between 20 to 30 of the neighborhood, punks around, raising hell and cursing the Angels. Feeling a bit nervous as it is, my heart begins to pound when Angel Mike Hill says to me, "Hey man, you got a whistle?" No. "They may decide to take you out, watch your back."

Hill is probably the most impressive Angel of all because he fights crime with a handicap; he is without the bottom half of one of his legs. Nicknamed "Stilts," Mike Hill is the kind of person you want to cheer for. He is a good man with a great heart.

Asked why he is an Angel, Stilts replies: "To stop some of the crime. I've got to raise kids in the neighborhood."

Now the Angels are being checked, in order. First Clarence, then Soup, and so on. Before each patrol, every Angel is given a check to make sure he hasn't any weapons on hand. The closest thing to that is the flashlight that most Angels carry.

But tonight, the Guardian Angels will need no weapons. After breaking into two groups of three, with one visitor, the Angels group back together an hour later without any action to report. That's OK; it's what the Angels want.

Back in the apartment, Soup and friends are greeted by a drunken young woman carrying a quart of beer. Having heard that Soup wants to patrol the Friendship

50 million fishermen can't all be wrong

By Lani Sinclair

"Gone fishin'."

Sound relaxing? More than 50 million Americans think so.

Those anglers take 750 million annual fishing trips, says the National Wildlife Federation, whose 4.1 million members and supporters include hundreds of thousands of men and women who fish.

Who are all these anglers?

- Some 31 percent are women, according to the NWF.
- About 36 million American fish in fresh water. Of those, 63 percent fish in manmade lakes, ponds and reservoirs; 40 percent fish in natural lakes and ponds; and 43 percent fish in rivers and streams.
- About 12 million Americans fish in salt water. Of those, 55 percent fish "surf and shore," 37 percent fish in the deep sea, and 43 percent fish in saltwater sounds, bays and tidal inlets and streams.
- About 2 million anglers a year go ice fishing. About 400,000 go spear fishing, 300,000 use a bow and arrow, and 1 million go "gigging" for frogs.

Not only are these millions of anglers having fun, but they're boosting local economies as well. Consider:

- The American men and women who fish spend $17.3 billion a year on the sport, including almost $4 billion for food and lodging, $3 billion for transportation, $2.5 billion for fishing equipment, $600 million for licenses and dues, $528 million for rental and other fees, $340 million for leasing and ownership fees, and $6.4 billion for special equipment such as boats and vans.
- Freshwater anglers spend $7.8 billion a year.
- Saltwater anglers spend $2.4 billion a year.

Despite these figures, not everything on the fishing front is rosy, according to the National Wildlife Federation.

"All of us who enjoy fishing must realize that the sport is threatened by many of our own environmental mistakes," said Jay D. Hair, NWF Executive Vice President, citing such problems as water contaminated by toxic wastes, agriculture runoff, overfishing, and dam construction on fish spawning streams.

"One of the most grave threats is the loss of habitat such as wetlands, which is increasingly critical. Another is acid rain, which is already responsible for fish losses in 212 Adirondack lakes and ponds, and threatens hundreds of other bodies of water across the country," Hair said.

"If we as a nation of anglers wish to continue to enjoy fishing and protect our fishing-related economy, then we must protect, enhance and restore our valuable fishery habitat."

Color, accessories add to summer wardrobe

By CAROL PRETLOW

Not long ago someone told me Spring/Summer is the most boring of all the fashion seasons. "After all," they argued, "Nothing innovative appears in the Spring." To emphasize the point further, they went on to say that during this time, style boils down to who looks best in least. Since I'm usually not one to argue politics, religion or the intricacies of fashion, I almost let them get away with it. Then I realized there is something to be said for new colors and accessory changes.

Although it seems both nature and women change their colors at the same time, this Spring we can look forward to some staples. For two Summers at least, Black has been supreme. This Spring it shares the throne with grey, brown and navy. Use your imagination and combine these basics with the electricity of jewel red, forest green, hot pink or shocking blue. If you have a tan, then nothing will show it off better than a blending of cream, beige and taupe. Print impressions from India, Africa, Japan and South America can take you to the tropics inexpensively, while at the same time show a creative use of color.

Whether you choose all out glamour or stick with the simple and basic, jewelry is equally entertaining in any season. Earth colored ceramic or wooden cuffs and beads of bone, natural wood or shell can lend a touch of primitive to your wardrobe. If glamour is your forte, take a cue from Chanel and join ropes of pearls with gold or jet beads.

Have a good week. Remember, real style is as much how you feel about yourself as it is what you wear.

A new kind of restaurant with appeal

For the past ten years, millions of American of all ages have gathered around their television sets to either relive, or be introduced to, the "Happy Days" of the 1950's.

This tributes more than just a well cast television production. It tributes the pleasant association from those days, lingering in the minds of the baby boom generation. It also speaks to the equally pleasant reactions of teens and young adults, who obviously enjoyed escaping the '80's more hectic realities, to meet the Fonz and Joanie and their buddies at Al's Diner.

Moxie's Deluxe Grille and Bar, a frank new kind of restaurant, has been created in the image of those distant days, which are remembered as filled with good feelings, good flavors and good friends. It is a concept based on the kind of quality food and service that made diners so popular in their day, yet Moxie's is very much updated to belong to the 1980's.

In the 1950's, people didn't rush to a drive-thru window and grab precooked microwaved burgers. They gathered at a favorite spot to eat and be with friends. In those days, people didn't communicate food orders through an electronic speaker, only to quickly drive around and away. Instead, they delighted in the time which was spent at the neighborhood diner or corner soda fountain, eating homemade ice cream and hand-formed thick burgers, served up by a neighbor or schoolmate from behind the counter.

"We're going forward in the '80's by going backwards," states Shawn Holder, president of Moxie's Inc. "Moxie's is a restaurant reminiscent of food and service like you remember from the good old days. In those days, burgers were handmade to order, breads and desserts were freshly baked and hot dinners meant hot out of the oven, not pre-made and kept warm. Moxie's is a restautant to trigger your memories and stimulate your senses back to those great times, with its great food, the minute you enter."

To develop its menu and atmosphere, Moxie's turned to restaurant consultant Dan Durick of Culinary Stylists. States Durick, "This is an honest restaurant concept, from its cooked-to-order foods to decor. It is neither a 'fern bar' nor a typical family restaurant. It's somewhere in between, with the best qualities of both. Moxie's, like its name denotes, is a gutsy, spirited approach to the kind of restaurant to which people are always attracted, with exceptional food presentation, personalized service and an interesting atmosphere."

From its food offerings to the decor of Moxie's, everything evokes remembrances of the Fabulous Fifties. Boasting a dedication to "Quality Forever" as its motto, Moxie's serves steakburgers made form 100% U.S.D.A. Choic beef, ground fresh on-premises and hand formed daily. Its steakburger policy, printed on the front of the menu, proudly proclaims burgers contain no fillers or extenders and represent an 85% lean beef and 15% fat distribution. They are served on fresh, crisp crusted rolls, which are baked on-premise daily.

A commitment to quality food is also exemplified throughout Moxie's other menu items. Hot platters include baby back ribs, rib eye steak, country fried steak and deep fried shrimp. Garden fresh salads and an interesting variety of finger food are offered.

The spirit of the old soda fountain is renewed in Moxie's frothy floats and rich sundaes, made with high quality, butterfat rich ice cream. All dairy products are of the highest quality, supplied to the restaurant by local dairies.

In addition to its varied food, Moxie's serves fresh fruit juices and a full cocktail bar offers imported and domestic beers, California Cellars® wines and mixed drinks.

Homemade sun tan lotion easy to make

Suede Coat, Cleaning - First, give it a good brushing with a suede brush, then wipe it completely with a piece of terry cloth that has been dipped in white vinegar, then wrung out until merely damp.

Any suede items, such as shoes, gloves, purses, can be cleaned using slightly stal bread. As the slice becomes soiled, change to another slice.

Sunburn, Relieving - Rub the burn with apple cider vinegar and pat on a very cold tea bag. If the burn is bad, make a paste of baking soda and white vinegar and pat it on the burn.

Suntan Lotion, Making Your Own - Mix together equal parts of sweet oil (odorless olive oil), brown vinegar, and cold brown tea. Put it in a spray bottle and give a good shake before spraying it on your skin.

Note: If you can't get sweet oil, ordinary olive oil will do.

Sweater, Drying It Quickly - Lay the sweater flat on a large beach towel, then lay another beach towel on top of the sweater. Roll it, pressing hard, with a rolling pin. You'll be surprised how much water comes out.

Sweeping Floors - Before sweeping your floors, give the bristles of your broom a good spray with furniture polish. Any dog or cat hairs, as well as lint and dirt, will cling to the broom. It makes sweeping much easier.

Sweet Potatoes, Dry Skins - To prevent the hard, leathery look and taste, rub each sweet potato with olive oil before baking.

Sweet Potatoes, Preventing Darkening - As you peel them, put them in a mixture of six teaspoons of salt and one quart of cold water.

By CHUCK FAULKNER

Tablecloth, Plastic, Preserving - Pad the table itself with two or three sheets of newspaper under the plastic tablecloth. Cover the table completely, then fasten the newspaper under the edge of the table with thumbtacks or adhesive tape. The plastic tablecloth will last twice as long with the padding.

Note: If the plastic tablecloth is clear plastic, simply use white paper instead of newspaper for the same results.

Tablecloths, Preserving - To give them a much longer life, never fold them the same way after every washing. Fold them crosswise after every other ironing, and they'll last for a much longer period.

Busch Gardens extends hours

Busch Gardens, The Old Country, began its summer operating schedule recently with extended hours from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. On Fridays and Saturdays, from July 6 through August 26, the European-themed park will remain open until midnight.

Famous for its Loch Ness monster roller coaster, a Munich-style Festhaus, superb foods and unique shows, Busch Gardens introduces a new thrill ride in 1984. Call "The Big Bad Wolf," the new generation thrill ride is like no other. Suspended from an overhead track, "The Wolf" travels a free-flight course seemingly out of control, swooping through colorful hamlets, swinging wildly around tight corners and then dropping 80 feet to a splashing finale in a lake below.

Concerts scheduled in the park's Royal Palace concert Theatre include The Oak Ridge Boys on July 27 and The Everly Brothers on August 3.

A single admissions price of $13.95 entitles visitors to all rides, regularly scheduled park shows and exhibits. There is a slight extra charge for celebrity concerts.

Busch Gardens is located three miles east of Colonial Williamsburg. It is a one-hour drive from Norfolk and Richmond, Va., and two-and-a-half hours from Washington, D.C.

Rose & Krueth educates within

Ten sales associates at Rose & Krueth Corporation, including several Virginia Beach residents, were awarded educational certificates in a recent ceremony ending a month of instruction.

Ruth Long, director of education and training at Rose & Krueth, taught the courses, which were geared for newly-licensed sales associates, seasoned associates, and an associate specializing in sales of new homes.

In the course for newly-licensed sales associates, students were taught such topics as fundamentals of financing, contract writing, telephone techniques; real estate ethics, realtor board procedures, servicing and marketing, sales with buyers, prospecting, and listings.

"Once they join Rose & Krueth, we teach additional courses of instruction designed to fine-tune their real estate skills," Long said. "After those courses, we continue the training of our associates to constantly update and increase their knowledge throughout their real estate careers."

New associates at Rose and Krueth include Virginia Beach residents Char Schwitters, Donna Murrell, and Bill Robbins; and Norfolk residents Linda Darden, Linda Bruner and Leslie Ware.

Receiving certificates for advanced training were three seasoned associates, Hank Pricenski and Ejnar Jorgensen of Virginia Beach, and Mary Ann Staub of Chesapeake. The three have been in the profession for varying lengths of time. Pricenski and Jorgensen are retired naval officers. Their course concentrated on advanced financing, contract law, communications, time management and goal setting. Diana Steele, of Newport News, completed the course for new home sales agents.

The Virginia Beach Chapter of the American Association of Medical Assistants recently held their Installation and Awards Banquet. Installed as the officers for 1984-85 were Darlene Paxson, president; Sandra Murphy, R.N. president-elect; Barbara Bromfield, LPN, CMA, vice-president; Leeanne Tryon, CMA, treasurer; Marlene Barry, secretary.

Dr. Peter Blanchard was honored as Boss of the Year.. Dr. Blanchard has been in private practice since 1977 in Virginia Beach specializing in Colon and Rectal Surgery. Dolores Conlon was chosen as Medical Assistant of the Year.

Phillips named to Chamber post

Bill J. Phillips Jr. of Virginia Beach has been named regional director of membership of the Hampton Roads Chamber of Commerce, according to HRCC President Bill J. Center. He will assume his duties July 2 in the Norfolk Council offices.

Phillips was formerly director of catering and conference services for Pavilion Tower Hotel and prior to that was assistant manager of the Princess Anne Country Club.

He began his hotel career with Omni International Hotel in 1976 and has held convention and catering managerial positions with such properties as the New Orleans Hilton, Holiday Inn Scope and both the Norfolk and Miami Omni hotels.

Phillips, 33, has resided in Virginia Beach since 1956. He is a graduate of First Colonial High School and Tidewater Community College. He lives in the Salem Lakes area of the Beach with his wife, Pam, and daughter, Noel.

Townhouse condos okayed

Harry Sandler has been granted a rezoning which will permit him to build five multi-family (townhouse condominiums) in Lakeview.

By a vote of 8-2 Council recently approved the rezoning from R-7 Residential District to A-1 Apartment District on a 17,500-square-foot parcel at the northwest intersection of Parks Avenue and 13th Street.

W.H. Kitchin III, Beach Borough councilman, had moved for denial. This motion lost when a substitute motion for approval passed with Kitchin and councilwoman Reba McClanan dissenting.

Kitchin agreed that the project would upgrade the intersection, but that the same situation exists in other parts of Lakeview. He said that he would deny the application "unless we decide that we want to increase (the density) in the whole area."

Councilwoman Meyera Oberndorf suggested that some way be found to limit density by drawing a boundary.

Planning Director Robert Scott said that the Planning Commission would like to define such a boundary and this issue may come up with the next draft of the Comprehensive Plan. He said that no decision has been made on how to do this. It could be block by block or street by street.

Denise T. Lanchantin of Virginia Beach was among 500 graduates to receive their LL.B degrees from New York Law School in last Sunday's 92nd commencement held at Lincoln Center's Avery Fisher Hall in New York City.

In his commencement address, Eugene V. Rostow, Sterling Professor of Law and Public Affairs at The Yale Law School and former Director of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency under President Reagan told the graduates that the belief in the law has never been more critically needed than it is today. "How the law is studied and, therefore, how lawyers conceive and carry out their duties, are causes for which serious men and women should fight and, if necessary, make great sacrifices," he said.

Virginia Beach man wins accounting award

Gregory L. Kubilins, son of Kenneth C. and Donna A. Kubilins of Virginia Beach, has won the E.I. duPont de Nemours Informations Systems Award, presented by the department of accounting at Virginia Tech's College of Business. The award is given for outstanding achievement in accounting information systems courses.

Kubilins, a rising senior, served as president of Tech's chapter of Beta Gamma Sigma, the national business honor society, and as vice president of the college chapter of Beta Alpha Psi, the national honorary and professional accounting fraternity. He has also been active in intramural sports.

Central Fidelity promotes three

At a recent meeting of the Board of Directors of Central Fidelity Bank, officer promotions and elections were announced. Belinda E. Bennett was promoted to international officer. Ms. Bennett recently joined Central Fidelity as an international marketing representative for the Tidewater area. Prior to joining Central Fidelity, she was with the International Division of Chase Manhattan Bank where she specialized in trade finance and international product development.

W. Council Riddick, III was promoted to assistant vice president, Mortgage Loans. Riddick is the regional mortgage loan production manager. He joined Central Fidelity in 1978 and has also served in branch management.

Michael H. Copley was promoted to assistant vice president, credit administration manager, Eastern Region. Copley joined Central Fidelity in 1978. He has served as a branch officer and more recently as the regional marketing officer.

All three reside in Virginia Beach.

Bedroom shop opens

The Bedroom East, Inc., has entered into a long term lease on 18,200 square feet at 2356 Virginia Beach Boulevard, in Virginia Beach (formerly occupied by Earle's Market). The Bedroom will have one of the largest showrooms in the area providing a wide range of waterbed furniture, bedding and other accessories.

Hanson joins Estes Realty

John C. Hanson has affiliated with Estes Realty Corporation in Virginia Beach as an Associate Broker.

Hanson entered the real estate business in 1979 as a salesman. He is a current member of the Realtors Million Dollar Sales Club and a Graduate (G.R.I.) of the Virginia Realtors Institute.

The Hanson Family resides in the Haven Heights section of Virginia Beach.

Jones working on anti-trust exemption

Virginia Beach City Councilman Robert G. Jones is serving on a Virginia Municipal League Committee working toward obtaining an exemption from anti-trust actions for municipalities.

The Committee plans to meet with Attorney General Gerald Baliles, who Jones said was only lukewarm before Congress in support of exemptions for municipalities.

Jones told Council at a recent informal session that the cities want the same exemption enjoyed by states.

Jones said that City Attorney Dale Bimson and other city attorneys throughout the state have worked on the issue, and that he solicited comments from Council members.

Moore successful

An application filed by R.G. Moore Building Corporation for more-dense zoning on three parcels containing 15.3 acres in Kempsville was approved last week by Virginia Beach City Council by a vote of 8-2 with Councilwoman Meyera Oberndorf and Vice Mayor Barbara Henley dissenting. Councilwoman Nancy Creech was absent.

The changes were from R-8 Residential District to A-1 Apartment District on a 6.7-acre parcel, from R-8 to A-1 on a 5.7-acre parcel and from R-8 to A-1 on a 4.9-acre parcel south of Bonney Road, east of Witchduck Road.

Freddie Mac's fee to be lower

The Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. (Freddie Mac) has announced lower prices for multi-family mortgage loans.

Starting immediately, Freddie Mac will refund 75 percent of the 2 percent prior approval commitment fee after purchasing a multi-family mortgage loan.

On a $15 million loan, the new refund amount would mean a $75,000 cost saving, said Bill Thomas, Freddie Mac's executive vice president for marketing and mortgage operations.

Freddie Mac previously refunded to lenders one-half the fee after purchasing the loan.

In recent years, Freddie Mac's multi-family lending activity has skyrocketed from $54 million in 1982 to more than $300 million in 1983, with even more volume expected this year.

William C. Overman Associates, P.C. engineers, surveyors, and planners, recently relocated their offices from Sellger Drive in Norfolk to the new Commerce Park at 380 Cleveland Place in Virginia Beach.

The new, single story building, designed by Edward R. Roehm, A.I.A., of the Design Collaborative, Virginia Beach, is a structural statement of the engineering firm's dedication to energy conservation, fiscal responsibility, and the improvement and preservation of the environment.

The structure is of passive solar design, an architectural concept in which the building itself is designed to collect sunlight. Twelve skylights, located in critical areas, maximize natural lighting. Pella windows with slim shades on the east, south and west sides, prevent glare on the work surfaces and eliminate heat gain. Overhangs were calculated to shade the windows from May through September.

Simple and unassuming in outward appearance, the heart of the building features an unexpected surprise: a lush, tropical garden in an enclosed courtyard. Landscaped by Virginia Beach architect Craig Siska, the 800 square foot atrium provides natural light and a serene, refreshing view of the interior offices, conference room and lounge in all seasons.

True to the firm's dedication to economic use of funds with a high-quality result, the cost of the new building was a moderate $50 per square foot.

Overman Associates was established in 1977 by William C. Overman, a Virginia engineer with nearly 30 years experience in Consulting Engineering. Outsmarting The Bear.

When the bear's loose on Wall Street, large investors may worry. The bear is mean. But he can be outsmarted. Just join the Payroll Savings Plan and buy U.S. Savings Bonds. Bonds have a variable interest rate combined with a guaranteed minimum.

That means you get higher returns in a bull market and protection in a bear market. And that's a smart move.

Judi Hart

Beach student nabs TBA scholarship

Tidewater Builders Association recently awarded a college scholarship to Virginia Beach student Judi Hart.

Hart, a 1984 graduate of Kempsville High School, was one of four area students to receive a $5,400 scholarship. The award is to be used toward four years of undergraduate study at the school of her choice.

The scholarship recipients were selected on the basis on academic ability and financial need.

Hart, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hart of Rittman Road, plans to attend Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute in New York. She will be studying chemical engineering.

Hart, who combined her junior and senior high school years in order to graduate early, was a member of the Key, science and Spanish clubs. She also did volunteer work at Leigh Memorial Hospital.

since 1966, TBA's Scholarship Foundation has awarded scholarships to hundreds of deserving area students. Today, the foundation is one of the largest sources of scholarship funding in Tidewater.

The association will continue to provide financial support to four other Virginia Beach students. These students will each receive a $1,350 grant for the 1984-85 academic year. they are: Steven M. DeWitt, a junior at the University of Virginia; Keith P. Lowe, a sophomore at UVA; Shelley W. Taylor, a sophomore at the College of William and Mary; and Kelly A. O'Hara, a sophomore at Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University.

TBA is a non-profit trade organization representing more than 10,000 people in the residential construction industry in Chesapeake, Norfolk, Portsmouth, Suffolk and Virginia Beach.

Back Bay

watershed flanking the Pungo peninsula and the Atlantic shore.

•An amendment to the Comprehensive Zoning Ordinance to create new zones to protect forests, primitive lands and productive agricultural soils within the Back Bay Management District.

•Reduction of front-foot property tax assessments for productive agricultural lands.

•Establishment of a "Public Lands Trust" to which open space lands can be donated, free of inheritance tax.

•Adoption of other measures that can be easily adopted without significant changes in city authority or programs.

Watershed management protective strategy, entailing the greatest degree of change in city tools, include:

•The creation of a Back Bay Management District

•Adoption of zoning for areas of critical community value, which would include forests, primitive lands and protecting productive agricultural soils, hamlet centers, public access points, flood plain areas adjoining critical wetlands and wildlife habitats and lands adjoining significant aesthetic and environmental resources such as the Lotus Garden.

•Creation of a Virginia Beach Land Bank which through a revolving fund would allow the city to acquire land threatened by inappropriate development and to later resell the land to appropriate users under suitable deed restrictions.

•Adoptions of a system for the transfer of development rights which would allow private land owners and developers to work out the transfer of development under city guidance. This would not prevent development but would divert it to more suitable areas outside the Back Bay and North Landing River watersheds.

In reference to water quality and salinity control, recommendations include:

•Maintenance of the Little Island salt-water pumping station at its present capacity with the pump line extended 6000 feet with three spaced-out falls to permit better dispersion of introduced salt water. The improved dispersions should achieve a somewhat higher average salinity in those portions of greater Back Bay where salinity is presently low and should prevent the excessively high salinity peaking that occurs with the present inadequate dispersion. The cost would be $400,000. However, some of the cost might be recovered by reduced operation of the pumping activities which now costs the city $86,000 a year, running the pump constantly.

•Improving agricultural practices by minimizing cropland erosion through proper crop rotation and other measures, modified till-no-till practices where soil qualities allow, and property designed and maintained livestock animal waste holding facilities and lagoon spill mounds.

The most sobering information was the estimated rise in the sea level of nine feet over the next century. "That's a foot every 11 years!" remarked Mayor Louis R. Jones.

Mann said that it is important to have a flood plain delineation. He said that since the natural closing of Currituck Inlet (about 100 yers ago), salt water does not feed into Back Bay which is why the salt water pumping station was built.

In describing the area, Mann said that the nearest ocean impact on the Bay is from Oregon Inlet, but that there is little lunar tidal influence there with most of the rise and fall in the Bay (two feet and sometimes more) resulting from winds. When the water rises to three feet, the marginal land is often inundated, he said.

Noyes said that a valuable opportunity was lost when no monitoring of the Bay was done in 1976-77 when the pumping station was not operating. The station had burned down and a new one was constructed. He said the information would have been valuable to the whole country.

He added that a side benefit of the pumping is that it keeps a lid on the algae in the Bay.

The final report, which cost the city $150,000 is being prepared.

Visitors—United States Senator Paul S. Tribie, Jr. met with students from Kempsville High School during their recent trip to our nation's capitol. The group spent their time together discussing current affairs in general as well as specific issues before the senate.

Three graduate VMI

Three Virginia Beach area cadets were among the 1984 VMI graduates. Thomas A. Adams and William R. Hemingway III both received bachelor of arts degrees in economics and Keith A. Buckley received a bachelor of arts degree in history.

Annas

Among the newcomers to the program for this summer are Jerry James of New York, Jackie Merritt and Linda McGreevy of Norfolk and Ellen Sinclair of Virginia Beach.

Jerry James is a widely-exhibited painter and an experienced college-level art instructor. His approach is experimental with courses in working with new technologies and materials in artmaking ("Beyond" the Retina") and exploring innovative attitudes associated with the current renewal of painting in national art circles ("Painting Now") among others.

Jackie Merritt has taught for 13 years at universities and was the 1983 Artist-in-Residence for the Virginia Beach Public School System. Among the classes she will teach are "The Nontraditional Still Life" and a study in depicting space on a flat surface entitled, "Investigations in Space."

Art critic for Port Folio magazine and Old Dominion University's contemporary art historian, Linda McGreevy will teach "Art Since 1960," a 24-year survey to inform and promote lively discussion regarding recent art directions.

Other ArtStudio highlights are:

• A landscape "on location" painting and drawing course by Suzanne Stevens.

• A beginning drawing course by Dorie Mandel.

• A porcelain class for advanced students by James Chalkley.

• A course in raku ceramics by Pam Lassiter.

• Ceramics for beginners by Donna Winchell.

• A series of four workshops on calligraphy by Carole Morrison.

• Two eight-week classes in silkscreen art by Jack Thome.

• A four-week silkscreen course by Ellen Sinclair -- students make and take home their own silkscreen frame and learn the art of silkscreen.

Tuitions are reasonably priced and vary from course to course; some classes require a nominal materials or model fee. For more information or to register call the Arts Center at 425-0000.

Museum and the Marine Science Museum. They were not.

The Alliance includes communities both north and south of Hampton Roads -- Norfolk, Portsmouth, Virginia Beach, Chesapeake, Suffolk, Hampton, Newport News, York County and Jamestown/Yorktown/Williamsburg.

Among the Virginia Beach attractions mentioned were the surf, Lynnhaven House on Wishart Road, the Neptune Festival, the Virginia Beach Arts Center, and the Pavilion.

Jones said he would like to see more of the arts groups headquarted in Virginia Beach.

well being. The extent to which a person is satisfied with the quality of his/her personal or family life is reflected in job performance and ultimately related to the decision to stay in the Navy.

The NAS Oceana Family Service Center, with a staff of seven in addition to the director and his deputy, presently offers a wide range of services and programs with many more in the planning stage. Current services include counseling, information and referral, budget advice and financial education, relocation assistance and briefings.

The NAS Oceana Navy Family Service Center is located in building 320 at the corner of London Bridge and Princess Anne Roads on base and is open weekdays from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Call 433-2912 for information or appointments.

Bird show scheduled

Tobey Robinson, a local pet store representative, will be presenting a program on exotic birds on Tuesday, July 3, at 10 a.m. in the Windsor Woods Area Library for participants in the Summer Reading Program. Robinson will include birds such as Cockatoos, Parrots and others in his program. For more information about the bird show or the Summer Reading Program, please call the library at 340-1043.

Spinning demonstration at Lynnhaven House

There will be a demonstration of colonial spinning techniques this Saturday, June 30, at Lynnhaven House, 4405 Wishart Road, just off Independence Boulevard.

The demonstration will be conducted between noon and 4 p.m. by Marcia Jones. There is a small admission fee to tour the house and grounds of the restored colonial farmhouse (circa 1725).

Mounie and Holloman honored

The Virginia Beach Association of Educational Office Personnel has selected Dr. James C. Mounie as its 1984 Administrator of the Year and Ruth Holloman as its Secretary of the Year.

Lohman

But seasons aren't the only things to offer surprises. The City of Virginia Beach itself has been one unexpected discovery after another. My introduction to Virginia Beach was the oceanfront. Ah, I thought, this is a typical resort community. Then I discovered Windsor Woods and Kempsville, which were identical to the suburbs I had left behind. Fascinating, two cities rolled into one. But that wasn't the end either, for in the south I found real countryside full of fields, wood and newborn lambs. This city was getting decidedly more interesting by the day. But it wasn't until I happened across Sandbridge, which can be compared to no other place and which has totally captivated me, that I realized I had stumbled across a real treasure. I'm keeping my eyes open, for having found four unique parts to Virginia Beach, I'm sure there are more out there, just waiting to be discovered.

Finally, I must, say a word about my only negative reaction, that of the traffic and the rather unusual configuration of some of the roads in the city. Someday, I will learn to drive on the feeder roads. In the meantime, I don't need to try any of the stomach churning thrill-rides at Kings Dominion; just driving down Virginia Beach Boulevard at rush hour has satisfied my craving for adventure for many months to come.

So far, life in Virginia Beach has been one surprise after another -- most of them pleasant. I'm happy I came, and if first impressions are any indication, I know I'll never be bored.

Editor's note: Toni Lohman has joined her colleagues in rotation and will appear regularly in The Sun's new Books column.

a long-standing feud with the Treasurer's Office, refuses to pay his taxes because he says he was "deprived" of his constitutional rights.

Engessor continues to raise and lower the flag daily but holds on to his visions of seeing a larger flag fly over the library once again.

Angels

Apartments in Virginia Beach next, the young girl has some advice for her friends.

"Don't try Friendship, man. A friend of mine got killed over one dollar bill," she says frantically, "a guy beat the hell out of him."

Having experienced the bad part of town before, that kind of talk probably won't scare the Angels off. Soup, who joined the Angels after his sister was raped, isn't one to scare easily.

Neither is Margaret Shank, an 18-year-old who patrols with the Angels while also serving in the Army.
